Seventh Day Adventists Open Charlotte Meeting

CHARLOTTE, Jan. 22.—(P)—The Carolina conference of the Seventh Day Adventists was in session here today. Pastor C. S. Longacre, secretary of the Religious Liberty Association of America, Washington, D. C., was the principal speaker.

Longacre told Adventist ministers assembled here from North Carolina and South Carolina that Americans must stand for freedom.

He cited the right of every religious sect "to propagate its own faith," but decried the use of public funds "to promote religious views."

GUN POWDER A MISNOMER
W E A T H E R F O R D, Ola. (UP)—Smokeless gun powder is a paradoxical misnomer. It is neither smokeless nor a powder, declares Dan Rivkin of Southwestern Institute of Technology at Weatherford, Okla.
Smokeless gun powder is actually a glue-like form of cellulose nitrate and is usually molded into cylindrical shapes, he explained. Used as a propellant, the "powder" must be processed so it will not shoot projectiles too slow or too fast, but at the exact speed required.

The air at high levels is cold because it doesn't absorb much heat and doesn't easily retain it.

Fabrics striped with fur make one of the newest cape fashions, as this Dein-Bacher, combining gray wool and Persian lamb, proves. There's an idea you can adopt for your very own if you have a woolen cape to trim and an old fur coat from which you can salvage a few good strips.

We, The Women

Make Clothing Drive A Family Project

By RUTH MILLET-NEA Staff Writer
The Victory Clothing Collection this month aims at collecting from the American people for use by the suffering victims of war in Europe, China and the Philippines 100,000 garments—plus shoes and bedding.

Why don't we make it a family project this year—instead of leaving it all to Mama.

Let Dad go through his closet—or the third of the closet that is called his "half"—and decide what things he can get along without.

Let even the smallest children help look through their clothes for dresses, overalls, sweaters, coats and shoes that are outgrown.

Make sorting the clothing that is stored away in the basement or attic a family affair, not forgetting that if it has been stored away a year or more, it might as well be given away without any reservations, except for the question "Is it warm and still wearable?"

Florida Man Charges Surplus Sales Unfair

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—(P)—Rep. Rogers (D-Fla.) asserted today the government's surplus property disposal system is being operated "ridiculously and unfairly."

He told the House that surplus property from his state is shipped to Atlanta for disposal and Florida veterans thereby are "precluded from making any purchases unless they go to Georgia."

"The government has warehouses in Miami and elsewhere it could store surplus property and give our Florida boys a chance to buy some of it," he said.
