

N. C. Symphony Memberships Still Open

Orchestra To Play Here May 15; School Children Will Be Given Free Concert

With the announcement of the May 15th date of the North Carolina Symphony in Wilmington, it is expected that many music lovers who have not yet become members of the N. C. Symphony Society will want to do so. The general membership of $1 will admit to one local concert, and the active membership of $5 will admit to any concert within the state during the season.

Colonel Kermit Hunter, business manager of the Symphony, informed the local committee that memberships would be accepted up to May 1st, with a ticket sale at $2, being offered the week of the concert, if any seats are available.

The local committee requests that the money, with name and address carefully given, be mailed directly to the N. C. Symphony headquarters, Box 1111, Chapel Hill. Membership cards will be mailed from the state office.

The most valuable part of the North Carolina Symphony orchestra's service is the free concert which is given to school children wherever the orchestra plays. This will take place in Wilmington May 15, in the afternoon, time and arrangements to be announced. All seats for the evening concert open through membership card or ticket sale. This applies to children as well as adults.

As of March 1, the local campaign for the Symphony expansion fund netted $1,660, with a total membership of 300. It is expected that every seat will be filled for the concert May 15, and music lovers are urged to take advantage of the extension of time for memberships through the mail, rather than wait for a last minute rush for tickets at $2.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP)—Foot soldiers of the infantry won 177 of the 240 Congressional medals conferred on army personnel in World War II.

Enlisted men received 157 of the nation's highest military awards, while officers were awarded 83. About 2,000 Congressional medals have been bestowed since the decoration was created in July, 1862.

The War department made known the figures Tuesday in reporting on the number of army decorations and awards from Pearl Harbor through Nov. 30, 1945. The total was 1,725,344, exclusive of purple hearts which were given to all men wounded in battle.

Femininity Stressed In Balmain Collection of New Paris Fashions

By ROSSETTE HARGROVE
PARIS, March 6. (NEA)—The second week of the Paris showings opened with the Balmain collection, which is the object of much speculation. This creator is considered a topnotcher among the younger stylists and is patronized by the younger set and such style-conscious dressers as the Duchess of Windsor. Balmain definitely endorses longer hems. Informal dresses have calf-length skirts. Formal dresses for such daytime occasions as races, e-hibitions, and receptions are ankle-length hobble skirts.

The general trend of this collection stresses intense femininity in the details as well as the rounded shoulder and hip lines and the nipped-in waistline. Suit jackets are usually writ-length, easy fitting through the top, but smooth over the hips. These are mainly light wools with blouses providing the vivid color note or high-necked Shetland wool sweaters picking up the color of the suit tweed or check.

Afternoon ensembles offer a choice of dresses topped by every type of coat from gored reefers to boleros and coolie jackets of various lengths usually topping modernized chemise dress. The spring note is stressed with wide use of candy-striped silks facing draped panels and belts of black and navy as well as pastels. Crisp white touches are also featured.

ROMANTIC GOWNS
Ankle-length formal dresses, distinctly reminiscent of 1910 fashions, are complemented by wide-brimmed oigrette-trimmed hats and snakey twin fox stoles. Typical of this mode is a chestnut-brown sheath topped with a cut-away jacket revealing a white gilet and worn with white foxes, white hat and shoes.

Evening dresses include romantic gowns with flowing skirts and strapless bodices. Others are reminiscent of Jane Austen characters. A new note here is the use of plain and spangled net over gleaming light-colored satins. Petticoat frills peeping below the hem as in a cherry and white striped satin ankle-length dress are earmarked for deb wear. Balmain reintroduces satin for formal siren gowns. One strapless pearl gown is entirely covered with fine white guilure lace and is shown with a romantic flowing white satin cape. Colors used include lilac, reseda, marrow, cedar, green, yellow, off-white, gray, pastel blue, and pink for street wear as well as navy and black.

Balmain's collection details include calf-length plus-fours for beach wear under a gathered apron skirt tying in back. The short-sleeved top is of striped pailsey cotton. Another plus-four outfit is topped with a romantic, red-lined cape of light gray jersey. A Gibson Girl lilac gabardine raincoat with a matching umbrella dangling from the belt is worn over a pleated black skirt and a mauve-and-white striped blouse.

"NO FOUNDATION"
WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP)—The White House says there is "no foundation" to a report that Secretary of State James F. Byrnes will be placed in the President's cabinet by Gen. George C. Marshall. White House Press Secretary Charles Ross authorized the statement Monday night in connection with a published dispatch that Mr. Truman was displeased with Byrnes' "policy of appeasement" toward Russia.

We, The Women Teachers Grossly Underpaid

By RUTH MILLETT
All but 179 of the more than 800 teachers in the public schools of Paterson, N. J., suddenly became too "ill" to report for work one day recently—in protest against the city's withholding from them a cost-of-living bonus.

Parents who had deposited Johnny in front of his schoolhouse at the regular time that morning had to go back and get him a little later. A teachers' strike—extending over even a week—is one that ought to get results. For after a few days of having the kids underfoot mothers would say to fathers, "Those teachers are worth whatever they say they are."

It would probably take a strike in most communities to make parents realize just what teachers are paid—and what they are worth, just for keeping children out of mischief and out of the way for six or seven hours a day. School teachers are completely taken for granted by most parents.

They wouldn't be if the parents—fathers as well as mothers—visited their kids' classrooms occasionally. I spent a day recently watching a first-grade teacher handle a roomful of children at the pushing, shoving, wriggling age. And the way she handled them seemed like a modern miracle.
