Harold M. Hinkel Addresses Meet Of Business-Professional Women

The regular meeting of the Business and Professional Women's club was held at the Friendly cafeteria Friday evening.

The evening devotional, "Be There Therefore Perfect" was offered by Helen Dobson. Miss Dobson spoke briefly on the many factors that are necessary in the final completion of the finished product or ultimate aim of their individual.

Miss Dolores Farrow was in charge of the program and introduced Harold M. Hinkel, manager, United States Employment Service. Mr. Hinkel spoke on "Can Women Hold the Line on Jobs?" He emphasized the interest of this club in the future progress in this community and increased earnings in the light of probable changes in Wilmington's New Economic development; what field of work offers the best opportunity for advancement.

Mr. Hinkel stated that women in the nation as a whole accepted the challenge of war necessity and stepped into production jobs normally held by men and were a deciding factor in the "Miracle of Production." Women helped to design, plan, expedite, produce, process and deliver 100,000 planes a year, the atomic bomb, tanks, cars, guns, bullets, clothing, feed, medicine etc. Women factory workers alone increased by 750,000 between 1939 and 1946. The need for women to continue in business was pointed out in the industrial expansion of the south. Every city in North Carolina of any size and many small villages have already acquired a new industry or several new firms. All of these firms use women in administrative, and production positions.

Wilmington has seen a tremendous upswing in women at work in these war years. Camp Davis, Blueenthal Air Field, Ft. Fisher and the shipyard were war industries that drew women from a large area in record breaking numbers. Other industries, the stores, laundries, restaurants, hotels, banks, insurance offices and every business boomed with an ever increasing demand for women.

With the arrival of V-E day and V-J day and the subsequent demobilization of these thousands of war workers, many felt an economic disaster would appear from which we would not recover. Yet, in spite of this decrease in war industry, the need for women in stenographic, secretarial, clerical and administrative positions remains apparent.

To meet this challenge, Mr. Hinkel said the women need to wage a campaign to raise the working standards, wages and economic standing of waitresses, sales clerks, hostesses. Wilmington now has a shirt factory, two hosiery mills, a neck-tie factory, and a textile mill offering employment to some 600 women. We are going to get many new industries that will employ males which is our major unemployment problem. We will also get industries that will need women — for example, our new six million dollar pulp mill will need women in many positions.

Yes, Mr. Hinkel further states, if you ladies are going to hold the line on jobs, you will have to rise and meet this challenge.

Miss Farrow and her committee consisting of Helen Dobson, Sadie Casteen and Maude Hughes, presented this program which was enlightening, timely and most enjoyable.

Some business matters were discussed including the BPW club endorsing the resolution of the Junior Chamber of Commerce concerning the city auditorium.

Miss Sally Betts Knox was voted in a member and guests attending were: Ione Pinner, Myrtle Lee Vick, Helen Lovering, Ann Barksdale, Lois Ward, Lucille Butler, Ruch Sinclair, Frances Rose and Mattie Robinson.
