NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—(P)—Cot-ton prices for all deliveries moved to new highs for the season today as the New York Cotton Exchange resumed Saturday sessions for the first time since June.

Futures prices generally were up from $2.70 to $5.00 a bale and he October 1947 position traded at 34.42 cents a pound above Frilay's closing quotation.

Heavy buying was attributed to growing belief that the government cotton crop report due Monday would not show the slight improvement in prospects indicated by private reports in recent weeks, but would be about in line with the Aug. 1 government report. ctor contributi buying wave was said to be the prospect of heavy textile sales within the next few weeks under new OPA ceiling schedules which mills say are favorable.

A Warning from our Veterans' Commanders

"We . . . are determined to resist at home all who, by narrow isolationism, would separate us from our United Nations partners, or seek to divide and conquer us from within by racial and religious bigotry . . .

"We are confident that all patriotic Americans will stand united in peace as in war as partners in a common enterprise to reduce the smokescreen of intolerance and other efforts to destroy our way of life."

United Nations Conference, San Francisco, April 1945

"We reaffirm these principles set forth by our predecessors."
