Reiterating Turkey's previous defense of the straits administration during the war, Inonu said the country was willing to submit the case to international arbitration.

Russia, in two notes asking for concessions in the Dardanelles administration—both rejected—contended that Turkey did not carry out fully the Montreux provisions against German and Italian vessels.

"It is false to say that aid was given to the Axis nations," Inonu said.

He spoke warmly on Turkey's close friendship with Britain and America which had supported the Turks in the recent exchange with Russia over the straits.

Inonu also expressed sympathy with Egypt, the largest of Arab nations, toward whom the Turks have appeared to be turning more and more.

"We nourish with pleasure the hope that our relations with Egypt will develop in friendship," the President said.

MORE ABOUT RESOLUTIONS

Same Request

The request for a break with the Franco regime was in substance the same as the demand which Poland submitted to the Security Council last April along with a charge that Generalissimo Francisco Franco threatened world peace.

The original Polish complaint now lies dormant before the Security Council, where it has remained without action since June 27 when proposals for its disposition were blocked by Russian vetoes.

Under terms of the U. N. Charter, the assembly will be able to act on the new Polish proposals only after the Spanish question has been dropped from the council's agenda. While it remains before the council, the assembly may discuss it but may not make recommendations.

The council, however, has scheduled a meeting for Monday afternoon when it is expected to drop the question to clear the way for assembly action.

The resolution asking for a break said that since the original complaint against the Franco regime "the situation in Spain has deteriorated and continues increasingly to disturb and endanger international relations."

The resolution also called on the assembly to express its deep sympathy to the Spanish people and added that "it hopes and expects that in consequence of this action the people of Spain will regain the freedom of which they were deprived with the aid and contrivance of Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany."

NAME AND FAME — The name and fame of Flora Macdonald is a priceless inheritance in the hospital, picturesque old town of Fayetteville. It touches this charming old place with world romance and world renown. It was there she lived! It was to this place—then called Cross Creek—that Flora and her husband, Allan Macdonald of Kingsburgh, came in the year 1774, after a short stay in Wilmington, where a great reception and a grand ball were given in honor of the Scottish heroine.

You are shown the spot where the Flora Macdonald house stood. But the point of highest romantic appeal is the Cool Springs, called "Flora Macdonald Spring," and the broken old stump, called the "Flora Macdonald Tree."

This old stump was in the year 1776 a great oak, and under its spreading branches Flora took her stand on the day of the "Highland March Out."

This is far from all, but kind reader the deeds of Flora will have to wait another column when once again Miss Black will continue her story.

SOUTHPORT, Nov. 1. — Judge John J. Burney of Wilmington spoke to a large gathering of Democratic men and women voters in the courthouse here Friday night. One fact brought out is that the Brunswick county road situation is being emphasized in the closing days of the campaign.

In part, Judge Burney said: "It will be but a short time now before the Democratic State Highway commission begins its great post-war road building program, and it will be but a short time before roads in Brunswick county, especially secondary roads, are built for year-round and all-weather travel conditions."

Neither the Orion nor the Superb were hit.

First accounts of the firing on the Leander gave neither the place nor the date of the attack. In view of recent events it was believed likely that the incident occurred while the warship was passing through the same strait.

casts, of the status of the government-UMW working contract.

Some of the miners were reported to have explained their walkout with their traditional phrase "no contract, no work," but Lewis has stated that the existing contract remains in effect during the negotiations.

Operators Angry

From Indiana and Ohio, too, came reports of a mine here and there closing down.

Coal mine owners, meanwhile, angrily criticized those in the government who, they said, had knuckled under to Lewis in dealing with his demands.

Elsewhere in the coal fields, other minor shutdowns were reported, but pay-day week-ends and hunting trips were among contributory causes.

President Truman has said flatly there would be no strike.

Lewis himself stayed away from the Washington negotiations. He sent subordinates to represent him at a meeting with coal mines administrator N. H. Collison, a Navy captain in charge of the federally-sized bituminous mines.

Private owners of some mines, not participating in the UMW-government talks, broke out with accusations that "politically-minded men" in the government had "capitulated" to Lewis' demand for a reopening of the government contract.

MORE ABOUT PUBLIC DISGRACE

As to any new concessions for Lewis the bituminous coal operators negotiating committee said in a statement that "any such abrupt surrender by government would be a public disgrace and a shame."

An initial session between Collison and a UMW delegation headed by John O'Leary, the union's vice president, broke up with all concerned declining to comment. There was continuing speculation he was asking for a shorter work week without a loss in pay.
