Other Jewish underground organizations from Palestine had threatened the lives of leading personalities, gave the reason for the added precautions.

"We would look silly if we acted after some threat had been carried out."

Receive Threat

Scotland yard had disclosed earlier that an anonymous threat had been made to assassinate Field Marshal Lord Montgomery unless British policy in Palestine is immediately changed.

Official government spokesmen, however, deprecated suggestions in the British press that a campaign of violence was in the offing.

The security precautions gave unexpected reality to the traditional "search" tomorrow of the cellars under the houses of Parliament, which will be conducted as they have been for three centuries on the opening day of a new session.

The custom dates from the Guy Fawkes conspiracy, whose members planted gunpowder under earlier parliament buildings and planned to blow the King and parliament sky high in 1605. The search for "gunpowder" is purely ceremonial and often merry.

Police who scoffed at the seriousness of the reported threats did not ally public uneasiness which stemmed in part from newspaper headlines reading "Stern Gang Men in London—Troops Stand By" and from the security measures taken around government buildings.

The local cold front faded in Louisiana, where a tornado and thunderstorms took one life Sunday. A maximum of 90 degrees was reported at Brownsville, Texas, Monday.

Temperatures between zero and five above were reported in Eastern Colorado, Southern Wyoming, Nebraska and Southeastern South Dakota in the wake of a two-day snow fall. Thirteen lives was the blizzard's toll.

Parco, Wyo., reported the nation's lowest official temperature Monday morning—four below zero.

Snowfall of two to ten inches in the belt from Eastern Colorado Northeastward through Nebraska and into Southern and Central Minnesota brought the maximum depth in some places to 16 inches.

FOND MEMORIES—"Another splendid recollection from those days is the wonderfully flavored rice to be had.

"As a ten year old boy I remember going to the Carolina Rice Mills located behind the Bullock Hospital on Water street.

"The milling process was the old fashioned mortar and pestle type that hulled the rice without removing the inner coat and left in the manner of whole wheat.

"That rice was 'fitten' to eat," he writes and then hurls a challenge at Along The Cape Fear.

"I hope some day you will get the nerve to advocate bringing back our rice fields to production. I have already told you the remedy," he concludes.

The remedy, kind readers, is no secret. And we hope to bring you the detailed plan for returning the rice fields to the Cape Fear together with the monstrous bugs and the coots at 50 cents per dozen dressed. But that will have to wait for another day.

ing money "to nations which deliberately misunderstand our motives," and said the preservation of "our free, private-enterprise system must be our main concern."

Secretary Harriman, noting the passing of price controls on most commodities, said businessmen must help prevent "as far as practicable further inflationary price increases."

He asked each corporation to restrict its purchases of products in short supply, postpone new construction so as to leave building materials for veterans' housing, and to back the administration's policy of continuing both import and export controls. These, he said, would help hold down world price inflation, aid other nations to build up dollar credits and to rebuild devastated areas and industry.

The Commerce secretary also urged corporations, when they invest in other countries, to bring in as partners nationals of those nations to avoid charges of "exploitation."

"When the arrested Childers appeared in court, Loomis appeared wearing a brown shirt. He explained in detail the purposes of the 'Columbians' to pressmen, who immediately widely publicized the organization.

"On the night of October 30 a Negro home near where the beating occurred was damaged by a bomb.

"Seemingly encouraged by widespread publicity, the 'Columbians' have held mass meetings at which speakers denounced Negroes, Jews and Mrs. Roosevelt.

"On November 2, Loomis and many other 'Columbians' began picketing the 'Columbians' and urged repeal of the charter permitting the existence of this organization.

"The Atlanta police were thus forced into action, and arrested Loomis and four others on the charge 'disorderly conduct'." "Loomis, however, is openly contemptuous of such legal actions. He boasts of wide support and asserts that there are already over 5,000 members in this organization in Atlanta, and that branches have been set up in other states."

"The United Nations is an organization of governments," he said. "And to keep world peace, it will take something more than an organization of governments."

"If we fought in World War II to end all wars, as we supposedly did in World War I, it will be up to veterans and such organizations as the American Legion to carry on as they did while serving in the uniform of their country."

Eure praised the local Legion home as "the most beautiful in the Southland" and predicted that the local post would soon be the state's largest.

AMERICANS OBSERVE DAY IN MANY PLACES

By The Associated Press

Americans around the world paid homage to the heroic dead of two World Wars in Armistice Day observances yesterday in which President Truman and other leaders called for lasting peace.

Several speakers warned against complete disarmament and urged the nation not to reveal atom bomb secrets nor weaken its defenses.

Mr. Truman, placing a wreath at the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington National cemetery, said in a brief talk:

"What we are trying to do now is to create a peace which will prevent the necessity of our grandchildren fighting a third World War for the same principals for which we stand now and have always stood."

He said the welfare of the United States and the world "are wrapped up in one package—peace."

At Frankfurt, Germany, Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, likewise calling for "accomplishment and preservation of a lasting peace," said past sacrifices will have been in vain "unless we of the occupation army meet the responsibilities today."

The committee which bridges will head when he takes over the chairmanship from Senator Kenneth D. McKellar (D-Tenn.) will be reduced in size from its present roster of 25 members to 21. Although most smaller committees will consist of seven Republicans and six Democrats, GOP leaders are likely to insist upon a 12 to 9 margin on this group.

Despite five vacancies on the present committee, that would force the retirement from the group of Senators Burnett R. Maybank (D-S.C.) and Dennis Chavez (D-N.M.), the latest Democrats to join it, and would give the Republicans three additional appointments.

about by low salaries and the turnover in teaching staffs," it added.

The NEA's findings were based on a survey by Frank W. Hubbard, director of the organization's research division. It showed a wide range in teacher salaries. In Mississippi, 23.2 percent of the teachers were reported to be making less than $600 a year. The District of Columbia was at the other end of the list, with no teachers drawing less than $2,000.

"The brightest spots in the total picture," the NEA said, "are to be found in the efforts to improve salary schedules. Much progress has been made in cities in recent months, and state legislative programs promise changes early in 1947."

"Most of these steps forward have been taken in the large cities where a distinct movement is afoot to adopt salary schedules with $2,000 to $2,400 minimums and $4,000 to $4,500 maximums. In metropolitan areas some of the new schedules may reach maximums between $5,000 and $6,000. A few county units have begun to compete seriously with cities in the $2,000-$4,000 range."

nel won't be much more than 23 feet deep."

"Our company brings in eight to ten tankers a month. All of them are traveling light because of the channel's condition, and at least half could carry full loads if the shoals could be dredged out," the oil shipping official declared.

In the meanwhile, City Attorney William B. Campbell and Cyrus D. Hogue, chairman of the Wilmington Port commission, will meet today to draft a resolution requesting early action by President Truman to unlock funds for dredging the channel. The resolution, backed by the State Ports Authority, is believed to represent the city's best hope for early dredging action.

Three other local shippers, contacted last night, agreed that the local channel, already shallower as a result of wartime neglect, is shoaling up to a dangerous point.

At the present time, the major effect of the cessation of maintenance work has been the material lightening of cargoes and eight or ten hour delays caused by waits for the high tide which is needed to carry tankers up the river, they said.

Ships drawing 29 feet are, for example, unable to negotiate the channel at low tide, one snipper said.

Spokesmen for the Standard Oil company said they are awaiting the arrival this week of the Esso Memphis, their first ship to dock here in a month, to determine what has happened to the channel since all engineers' dredging ceased last week. They estimated the river's present depth as 28 feet.

A Cape Fear terminal official said that lower Midnight Bar, the last channel point at which the Army engineers were working, was no more than 27 feet deep when the dredge Huston was called off the job there last week.

Berboth, who along with H. K. Gilbert, State's president, and Howard W. The CAB is expected to rule on applications by State Airlines and 24 other companies to set up "feeder" routes in the Southern states early in 1947. A CAB examiner has already recommended that State be given authority to operate across North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio.
