

UNITED NATIONS SITE VOTE TODAY

East, West Coast Factions Lobbying Strong For Locations

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP)—The battle for the United Nations permanent capital site intensified Sunday night with a variety of behind-the-scenes moves on the eve of a showdown meeting of the 54-member headquarters committee at Lake Success.

These developments brought a new upsurge in the hopes of Mayor Roger Laoham's San Francisco committee and a partly disclosed plan by Mayor O'Dwyer of New York to give the U. N. a wide selection of sites hereabouts with a suggestion that the peace capital might even be a skyscraper.

The unexpected appearance of Nelson A. Rockefeller at Flushing Meadow park late Sunday heightened speculation that the old Rockefeller estate at Tarrytown might be offered to the United Nations as a permanent home.

O'Dwyer declined to amplify his plans beyond suggesting that the U. N. could find any sort of location in the environs of New York and that U. N. could arrange the erection of a skyscraper on available land. He went on to suggest that the government might offer Governor's Island, a small dot in the upper bay off Brooklyn and the location of Fort Jay, to match the offer of the San Francisco Presidio.

New York thus far has formally offered 350 acres of the Flushing Meadow park, where the General Assembly is meeting.

While Philadelphia, with support led by Britain and Russia, remained nominally in the lead, the San Francisco committee which has long besieged the U. N. with offers to return to its charter meeting city, was still campaigning among the delegations.

A San Francisco committee source said an unofficial poll showed that 23 delegations indicated they favored San Francisco and possibly nine more would go along to make up more than necessary for the simple majority decision among the 54 committee members.

The headquarters committee meeting at 3 p. m. E. S. T., Monday in the interim headquarters at Lake Success was expected to vote first on whether the peace capital should be set up on the Atlantic or Pacific coast, and then to pin-point a location.

Decision In Doubt

If the West wins on that ballot, the Presidio would be the likely choice. If the East wins, further survey work might be in order to look into O'Dwyer's suggestions.

JAYCEES PLANNING SERIES OF EVENTS FOR YULE SEASON

A four-point Christmas program was announced last night for Wilmington Junior Chamber of Commerce by Jesse Sellers, its president.

The Junior Chamber's Christmas Activity committee, whose chairman is Walford Thompson, will take charge of the city's Christmas tree on the post-office lawn. The tree will be in operation from Dec. 17 until New Year's day.

On Dec. 23, the Junior Chamber will sponsor a Christmas party for the county's underprivileged children at the Second and Orange Streets Community Center. The program will include candy, movies and a Christmas surprise for each of the small guests.

The Junior Chamber will also present gifts to the aged inmates of the New Hanover county home, Sellers said.

Weds By Phone

LONDON, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Attractive Fay Jacqueline Robinson, 35, was married by transatlantic telephone Sunday night to a former American soldier, Ruel Parsons, 32, of Birmingham, Ala.

The Rev. W. R. Bulman, rector of St. Gabriel's church in suburban Cricklewood, stood at the bride's side and placed the ring on her finger.

"I was outwardly calm," Mrs. Parsons said, "but inside I was shaking all over."

She said she hoped to join her husband, whom she met at a party while he was stationed in England, next February or March. A reception for about 30 persons followed the ceremony.

HYDRO SHOPS BURN

TORONTO, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Fire gutted the Toronto Hydro-Electric commission's workshops and maintenance building on the downtown harbor front Sunday causing damage estimated by firemen at $250,000 or more. No one was injured in the blaze believed to have been caused by defective wiring.
