Selecting A Shade Tree For Home Grounds

BY DEAN HALLIDAY Distributed by Central Press Association A garden lends charm to one's home, trees give it dignity. They also enhance the value of the property. Therefore, when selecting trees for planting on the home grounds, choose long-lived ones which become more beautiful with age. Do not plant trees which are likely to break easily in storms. Also avoid untidy trees. Short-lived trees are the silver maples, Scotch pines, willows, poplars and cottonwood. Long-lived trees are the oak, red pines, sugar maples and beeches. The pin oak, illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, is one of the most attractive oaks native of North America. Known also as the Spanish oak and swamp oak, it makes an excellent shade tree for home grounds. The branches of the pin oak are thickly set with stiff pin-like twigs from which it gets its name. Its bark is rather smooth and grayish or dark brown in color. Also illustrated is its leaf. The pin oak can be planted in April just as the leaf buds are coming to life and before they are fully open. Small trees may be moved with bare roots. When planting this tree do not trim the leader or main branch. Other of its branches can be trimmed back if necessary to "shape" it. It grows rapidly and will make a beautiful, symmetrical lawn tree. When it is in foliage, its cut leaves give the tree a lacy appearance. In the autumn its brilliant red coloring and the acorns it bears make it still more attractive. Its acorns differ somewhat from those of other oaks in that they are wider than long. The pin oak is a hardy tree and can be planted with assurance that it will thrive even under "city conditions."

WE, THE WOMEN

'Mother's Helper'

BY RUTH MILLETT In summing up her married life the wife of a famous and important American recently described it as a "partnership"—in which she assumed that her job was to keep their home a serene and happy refuge for him, and to keep from him all the problems concerned with the running of a house. There is nothing unusual in the story. It is the picture many make that the wives of successful men almost always paint.

And yet the popular modern idea of a marriage partnership is one in which the wife expects her husband to come home from the work to share her duties and problems. Women have come to think that the man who doesn't want to listen to how hard the little woman has worked all day, help her figure out what to do about this annoyance or that, and lend a hand with the housework, is a selfish sort who doesn't appreciate his wife.

The husband who does all these things may be a comfort around the house. But the woman who wants her man to get ahead, should take a tip from the wives of successful men and look on the meaning of marriage "partnership" in a different light.

A man and woman are just as much partners if the woman assumes as her job all responsibility for running the house and taking care of the problems that come up in connection with that job.

Then home is a refuge to her husband. It is a place where he can rest and relax and then go back to his job each day ready to meet his challenges.

It is really a question of whether a woman wants her husband to succeed in his life's work—or whether she wants him to be a sort of mother's helper. She really shouldn't expect both.

Angel Reyes "Cuban Heifetz" To Play Here

Referred to as "The Cuban Heifetz," by one famous critic, Angel Reyes, violinist, will play here Monday night at 9 o'clock at the New Hanover High school auditorium under the auspices of the Community Concert Association.

The gifted artist made his first acquaintance with his instrument at a very early age. With his father Reyes Camejo, a well-known composer, and his mother an accomplished harpist, there was always music in Angel Reyes' Havana home, but as a child he gave evidence that he was to be the brightest star in the family firmament.

Angel Reyes began lessons with Professor Juan Torroella, and at twelve made his first public appearance. Shortly thereafter he won first prize against professionals of mature years, in a competition sponsored by the Havana Philharmonic Orchestra.

His debut recital at the Salle de L'Ecole de Musique prepared with Touche and Marcel Darrieux, concert master of the Colonne Orchestra and L'Opera Comique, was a sensational success and the beginning of an ever climaxing artistic progress.

His New York debut in 1941 at Carnegie Hall brought forth such critical comment as "Reyes is born to play the violin."

Subsequent performances, including appearance with such major orchestras as the New York Philharmonic-symphony under Artur Rodzinski and the Philadelphia orchestra under Eugene Ormandy, numerous network radio engagements such as the Voice of Firestone broadcast, have spread his fame throughout the United States.
