Symphonic Works Chosen By National Federation Club

The third annual list of works recommended for performance by major symphony orchestras during the concert season of 1947-48 has been set by the National Federation of Music Clubs through the selection of a committee of its orchestra committee, Mary Howe, distinguished Washington composer.

Longer than any previous list issued by the organization, it contains names of 18 compositions, eight of full symphony length, which Mrs. Howe has urged major conductors to consider in arranging their 1947-48 schedule.

As in previous seasons some of the works were written and premiered during the past season; others are of an earlier vintage. In the letters to conductors which accompanied the list, the chairman explains that the desire of the federation is not only to insure a hearing for new works, but also to have worthwhile works written in previous seasons by contemporary American composers repeated more than once so that audiences may become familiar with them, and thus gauge their merits more accurately than is possible with a premiere. Generous cooperation from conductors in programming the works recommended in previous years is reported by the retiring chairman.

The eight compositions of the symphonic list include the Symphony No. II of Maurice Strakosky; Symphonies by Tom Scott and Henry Cowell; the Symphony No. III of Aaron Copland; the Symphony No. I of Henry Brandt and the Symphony No. II of Paul Creston.

On the list of shorter works are "Sun Splendor" by Marion Bauer, "Music on a Quiet Theme" by William Bergsma, "Music for a Ballet" by Lukas Foss, "Ricer-care" for piano and orchestra by Norman Dello Joio, "American Dances" by Arthur Krentz, "In Memoriam to Those Who Fell in Battle" by William Grant Still, "New England Chronicle" by Richard Donovan, "Variations, Fuguing Tune and Rondo" by Ross Lee Finney, "Three Cypress Serenades" by Anis Fuleihan and "Tom Paine Overture" by Burrill Phillips.

The selection of these compositions was made by the American Composition committee of the National Federation of Music Clubs of which Otto Luening, head of the music department of Barnard college and operatic coach at Columbia university, is chairman. Members of this committee are Quincy Porter of the Yale university faculty, Marion Bauer of the Juilliard and New York university faculties, Douglas Moore, head of the music department of Columbia university; Ernst Bacon of the School of Music of the College of Fine Arts of Syracuse university and Mary Howe.

Mrs. Howe, who has resigned as chairman of orchestras because of the pressure of other duties has accepted membership on the International Music Relations committee of which Mrs. Guy Patterson Gannett, immediate past president of the National Federation of Music Clubs, is chairman. Her successor as chairman of orchestras is Miss Marion Rous of the Juilliard faculty, who is also a seasonal lecturer on the programs presented weekly by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony society.

*We, the Women

BY RUTH MILLETT

"The trouble with this year's college graduate is that he expects to start out on his first job with a good salary. He isn't willing to take a job for what he's worth while he is getting experience—the way we did when I started out," says an employer.

"That may be the way the picture looks from an employer's point of view. But in fairness to today's graduate, let's look at what he is up against when he goes to a new town to take a job.

Say he has a wife—and perhaps a child—as do so many of today's graduates, finishing their educations after the war interruption.

He can't go into a town and rent a house for $35 a month—the way the employer mentioned above admittedly did when he started out. Probably, he will have to buy one at an inflated price.

Nor can he feed and clothe his family on a shoestring today. No matter how ambitious he is or how willing to start at the bottom, he has to consider the price of pork chops, hair cuts, clothing, and furniture.

The big salary the employer is kicking about isn't a wage he has arrived at because he thinks he's good. He has arrived at that figure with pencil, paper and budget.

When the employer talks about his starting salary in the pre-inflation days, he is overlooking the housing shortage and the high prices which have completely changed the picture for today's graduate.

Airport Committee To Appear Before County Commissioners

A committee from the Airport Committee of the Chamber of Commerce will appear before the New Hanover county commissioners in the near future and present a program for joint city-county operation and management of Bluetenthal airport, it was decided at a meeting of the airport group yesterday afternoon.

The group will present their proposal for the joint operation and management before commissioners for their consideration and approval. The plan calls for the city to augment the airport budget by $10,000 in exchange for a partnership.

That plan and other matters pertaining to the development of the $11,000,000 Bluetenthal airfield, which were discussed before the city committee yesterday, will take the form of suggestions to the county commissioners.

Jaycee Auxiliary Holds Meeting

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Junior Chamber of Commerce met in the Woodrow Wilson hut at 7 o'clock on Thursday evening.

Mr. Mayne Albright, executive secretary in North Carolina of the United World Federalists gave an interesting talk on world government in which he stressed the problems facing our nation in trying to establish and maintain world peace.

The Jaycette went on record as endorsing the World Federalists movement which is to strengthen the United Nations.

Mrs. James Craig, Jr., corresponding secretary, read a letter from the Pensacola Junior Chamber of Commerce asking for help in constituting and by-laws for a similar organization.

Mrs. Ed Godwin, president of the auxiliary, read a letter from Rabbi Freedman, president of the Community Council, asking for representatives to be sent to the Court of Domestic Relations.

The president also made the following appointments: Mrs. J. C. Whedbee, parliamentarian assisted by Mrs. Wallace West and Mrs. Virginia Fergus; Mrs. Bob Howard social activities; Mrs. J. C. Whedbee, ways and means committee.

Clytie, in classic myth, was a sea nymph, daughter of Oceanus, who fell in love with Apollo, the sun god. Meeting with no return of her affections, she was mercifully changed into a sunflower, which constantly faces the sun throughout his daily course.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Most Dependable Garden Ferns

BY DEAN HALLIDAY

To bring a suggestion of the woods to the home flower garden, ferns are the plants to use. Some gardeners like to group many different kinds of ferns together in one location thus creating a fern bed. In the shaded sections of a rock garden ferns are invaluable in helping to soften the sharp effect of the rocks.

Ferns have few requirements. They want protection from the sun and lots of moisture. They prefer a northern or an eastern exposure. Good drainage is also essential. Woods soil should be mixed in with the garden soil in which ferns are planted.

Three "flowering ferns" called Osmunda, are excellent for gardening use. These ferns are called flowering because of their habit of producing fertile fronds resembling a flower-like spray or cluster of seeds. Two of these ferns, the Interrupted Fern and the Royal Fern, are illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

The Interrupted Fern grows from two to four feet in height. It is one of the best ferns for ordinary garden soil. The fruiting spores are borne on contracted pinnae half way up the stalk, as illustrated.

The Royal Fern grows three to four feet high and if planted in low, wet places in a garden will reach six feet in height. The upper pairs of pinnae, illustrated, bear the fruit.

Another flowering fern called Cinnamon Fern, grows five to six feet tall in favorable places. This fern is easily transplanted.
