Well-Controlled Temper Tops List Of Tricks To Outwit Hot Weather

By ALICIA HART
Your cool looks will be the envy of your sweltering friends if you'll use the following tactics in outwitting the weather:
1. Keep your temper. And stop talking about the heat. Unless you can make witty quips about the weather—and don't try to, if it takes effort—skip the heat as a conversational topic. This trite subject bores people who are irked by the obvious. As for keeping your temper, you'll find hot weather easier to take when you do than when you fret or fume.
2. Use more salt in your diet. If you perspire freely, salt lost via perspiration needs replacement or feet are apt to puff, ankles swell.
3. Drink more water. Passing by the cooler hourly for replacement of water lost through perspiration is a hot-weather help in fighting off fatigue.
4. Take a warm bath instead of a cool one. A warm bath gives you a longer lease on freshness.
5. Give your powder puff more peace by using a facial lotion or skin-freshener after you cream your face. The girl who doesn't remove every trace of face cream with a mild astringent freshener needn't wonder why the hot weather kicks up a shine on her nose.

Relaxing in a warm bath—as demonstrated by Sydney Wylie, above—is one way to insure freshness in hot weather.

Germany's War Brides Find Road To Alter Rough One

By RICHARD KASISCHKES
AP Newsfeatures
BERLIN — The wedding gift most prized by German brides in postwar Berlin is kitchen utensils—especially an aluminum cooking pot—according to a survey made by the newspaper Berlin Am Mittag.
The newspaper presented in detail the circumstances of ten bridal couples and their conclusion that the postwar road to the altar is a rough one, beset by tribulations and materials to test the stoutest hearts.
To begin with, a German girl even to become a bride has surmounted a difficult hurdle, for the male population of Germany is far in the minority due to war losses, and many of the men who survive are in no position to hazard the responsibility of taking a wife. Yet marriage survives and the grooms among the "typical ten" ranged in age from 21 to 40 years, the brides from 19 to 32. In one case a woman 32 was marrying a man of 22; she was a nurse and he was her former patient, whom she had met in the last six months.
Once a couple decide to wed, according to the newspaper survey, they almost unanimously agree upon one thing—if the girl is working she will keep her job, because they'll need the income.
Of the ten couples interviewed, only three could obtain lodgings of their own and the other seven had to arrange to live with the parents. Of these seven couples, only two had a room of their own in the parents' lodgings. Of the three who claimed to have their own lodgings, one couple had a single room and shared a kitchen with neighbors, another had a room with bath and kitchen.
Furniture is a difficult problem, but here the parents can sometimes help with certain items. But the most coveted wedding presents are utensils—since an aluminum cooking pot costs sixty marks (eighteen dollars by the thirty cent mark which is coming into increasing usage). A household scale comes at 250 marks.
Chinaware must be accumulated slowly and none of the brides had any prospect of obtaining a baby layette.
Of the five who obtained bridal dresses, two were in the dress-making trade. Two others were purchased in the black market, and the fifth borrowed. Wedding rings were scarce and usually are silver.
Where wedding celebrations were held they were limited to family circles—with pooling of rations.
Honeymoons? Only one of the ten couples achieved one at a resort. Four other couples took hiking trips into the country—with knapsacks which they hoped to bring back full of farm produce.

She wore an open-crown halo of faille taffeta in her hair, and carried an arm bouquet of white chrysanthemums tied with moss green ribbon.
Bridesmaids were Miss LaVerne Rogers of Wilmington and Mullins, S. C., Mrs. David E. Miss Ward, who entered the church with her father by whom she was given in marriage wore a gown of white duchess satin fashioned with a French cowl, a dropped shoulder neckline, and long sleeves which ended in calla lily points over the wrists. Her full skirt extended into a long court train. Her bridal veil of imported French illusion which fell in two tiers was held in place by a coronet of lilies of the valley. She carried a bridal bouquet of white carnations and tuberoses arranged in a cascade effect and centered with lavender orchids.
James R. Davis attended his brother as best man. Ushers were Walter Barnes and Jay Carter of Wilmington, David E. King of Wilmington and Raleigh, James H. Ward, Jr., of Raleigh, cousin of the bride.
Mrs. Ward, mother of the bride, wore a gown of heavenly blue chiffon with matching accessories and a shoulder corsage of orchids.
Mrs. Davis, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of pink crepe trimmed with sequins, matching accessories, and a shoulder corsage of orchids.
Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride. Guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. James R. Davis. Miss Dorothy Ward presided over the bride's book. The bridal table was laid with a Madeira cloth and centered with a three-tiered wedding cake which was topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom. Smilax and babies breath bordered the centerpiece. The entire scene was accented by burning tapers. Mrs. J. H. Ward presided over the punch bowl and was assisted in serving by Miss Ann Ward, Miss Freddie Flowers, Miss Harriet Walsh, and Miss Ida Jo Graham. White asters, gladioli and tuberoses backed with greenery were used in profusion throughout the home.
For traveling Mrs. Davis wore a suit of cinnamon wool gabardine with dark brown accessories and the corsage from her bridal bouquet.
Mrs. Davis is a graduate of New Hanover high school and has been employed by the Atlantic Coast Line for the past three years.
