Salad Show To Open Tonight State Nutritionist To Judge

Long-awaited by matrons and housewives of Wilmington homes, the Salad Show, under the direction of the New Hanover High School Home Economics Department will be staged tonight at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Community Center.

Miss Virginia Blount, executive secretary of the State Nutrition Council, who will be one of the three judges, arrived yesterday from Raleigh to mull over plans and pre-preparations with directors of the show, Miss Ruth Blackman, Mrs. Margaret Paulson, and Miss Shirley Newland.

Expected to be a highlight of the show will be the demonstration of the preparation of a three-course meal prepared from frozen foods by Mrs. Margaret Millar. Mrs. Millar will first make four shrimp cocktails, then fry frozen chicken and end by the preparation of an angel food cake covered with frozen strawberries and whipped cream.

The dietician's masterpiece of cookery will be given to the person winning one of the door prizes. In order to protect the original beauty of salads brought for display, Miss Blackman has asked that exhibitors bring a sample of their salad to be tasted by the judges.

The directors announced yesterday that entries would be accepted until 7:30 p.m., even if the contestants have not previously registered. Judges for the show, besides Miss Blount, will be C. P. Bretlow, Jr., manager of the Friendly Cafeteria, and Mrs. Eleanor Watts.

Two prizes will be awarded to each of the five classifications, and two door prizes to general public.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

If You Want to Save Garden Seeds

By DEAN HALLIDAY Distributed by Central Press Association

If you are planning to save seed from your garden this year (and why not?) only consider seed from vigorously growing plants. As some diseases carry over on or in seeds it is important that the plant from which seeds are selected be strong and healthy.

When seeds are fully ripe it is a simple matter to shake them from the seed pods into a dish or clean white cloth spread on the ground.

If the color of some special stalk is desired in its true hue protect the bloom with a glassine bag while the seed is forming, to keep off marauding insects. It is important, of course, to time your seed collecting so that you can gather them just before the pods break of their own accord and scatter the seeds on the ground.

The accompanying Garden-Graph shows ripe seed pods of lupine, just before they are ready to split open. Also illustrated, are the pods after they have split open and scattered the seeds.

If the weather should be damp when the seeds are collected, they should be exposed to the sun for a time before putting into a container for storage. Seeds should be kept in a cool, dry place. If they are allowed to absorb moisture while in storage, germination may start.

All seeds should be clean when stored. Remove any fleshy parts clinging to them by washing the seeds in cold water. Then spread them out in the sun until they are thoroughly dry.

Open House Planned For Teen-agers

Rising teen-agers—students who will enter the freshman class at New Hanover High school this fall—will be introduced to the seasonal teen-agers throughout the city, Thursday evening when the Recreation department gives a city-wide teen age open house in the Community Center.

Veteran teen-agers of the Community Center are making all plans for the get-to-know each other occasion.

1. Never leave a child alone. 2. Always know where you can get in touch with the parents. 3. Never fail to call the parents in an emergency. They also decided that they would take no sitting jobs that would last after midnight, and that they wouldn't let baby sitting interfere with their school work. For youngsters their age they are showing pretty good judgment.

These baby-sitters, themselves, recognize the need for knowing something about child care. But too many parents don't even bother to find out before hand weather or not a baby-sitter has sense enough to watch a child. Furthermore, often parents will leave a young baby-sitter with a household of children.

The very fact that there is an organization of baby-sitters, that has a 14-year-old as its oldest member, is proof that many parents today go out and leave their children in the care of paid sitters who are just children themselves. It looks as though these earnest young sitters are showing up a lot of modern parents by being more concerned over the welfare of the children than the parents themselves.
