Four-H boys and girls from some 28 clubs in New Hanover and Pender counties will celebrate "Achievement Day" at Legion stadium Saturday, according to an announcement by Roy R. Cook, assistant county agent.

The program will get underway at 11 o'clock with judging of competitive exhibits of individual projects carried out by Four-H boys and girls of the two counties during 1946-47.

Awards of gold and silver medals donated by the State extension service, Raleigh, will be a highlight of this part of the program which will be directed by Miss Eleanor Barber, assistant State Four-H leader for girls.

At noon the club boys and girls will enjoy a picnic lunch and during the afternoon, a recreational program will be run off with

The Wilmington Junior Chamber of Commerce announced plans for a huge scrap paper drive to be held in the city on Nov. 23.

On the Eastern Belt yesterday most leaf grades advanced from $1 to $5 per hundred pounds, but prices for cutters, lugs and non-descript eased off from Monday with losses of from $1 to $2.

Prices turned downward for most grades on the Old Belt. Leaf grades were irregular with gains and losses about evenly divided.

Other differences in the two proposals include the State authority's plan to seek new industries without restriction as against Marsden's plan to have the Maritime commission empower to veto any such industry except marine-related.

Marsden also wants the commission to decide whether the yard is getting proper maintenance, while the State seeks to guarantee only to maintain its present condition, subject to reasonable wear and tear, it was said.

City Briefs

The Wilmington Junior Chamber of Commerce announced plans for a huge scrap paper drive to be held in the city on Nov. 23.

The last half of the approximately $1,000,000 Cape Fear river dredging project was yesterday awarded the Standard Dredging corporation of New York City.

The Weather

The master plan's recommendations, he said, are based on a population of 60,000 or better. Wilmington has a large percentage of service people—white collar workers, including professional men—compared to the remainder of the country.

Since its inception, in early colonial days, the city has been fortunate in that its planners have laid out wide streets and have followed a general pattern in each successive increase of the corporate area.

He said that the percentages in the use of land in Wilmington run about like those of other cities in the nation considered. The areas which include the 30 per cent which is vacant are the very areas which are now being filled as the city spreads out.

Most of the city's traffic load is carried by Third, Fifth, Market, Castle, Dawson, Greenfield and 17th streets and the Carolina Beach roads, according to Simons' survey.

Recommendations call for a widening of Eighth street to 100 feet. The plan also includes two 20-foot center lanes which would be close to cross streets for several blocks at a space and could be entered only at important thorough streets running across eighth.

Such entry points would be at Castle, Dawson, Market and Grace, for example, according to Simons, who said that a traffic circle at ninth and Nixon, on an extension of the speedway, and an overpass at the Atlantic Coastline railroad crossing on Eighth would help facilitate speeding up of traffic.

In connection with the proposed express street the plan predicts that the traffic volume in Wilmington will double by 1960. The increase in traffic volume in the southern states is much greater than that of the United States as a whole, Simons pointed out.

To help alleviate the downtown parking situation, off-street parking garages and off-street parking lots are recommended.

The plan also points out that most of the city's traffic accidents are in the downtown business area on Third, Market, Princess, Chestnut, Second and Grace streets.

Turning to parks and recreation facilities and plans, the report shows that all recreation facilities now located in the city are being used to capacity and question how you are able to use such facilities in Wilmington.

"This is one of the city's weak points," Simons stated. The recommendation included enlargement and adding of new features to Greenfield park.

Among the latter addition of a band shell in Greenfield lake, with provision for outdoor festivals, was the chief recommendation. This shell, according to Simons, would be similar to the Watergate Theatre in Washington, D. C.

Another standout recommendation in the parks and recreation proposals is making of a great park along the Burnt Mill creek. This would provide the city with an inviting recreation facility, as well as beautification over a large area.

Other recreation recommendations include a number of play fields and playgrounds scattered at strategic spots throughout the city. The play fields would be primarily for older youth and adults in athletic games, while the playgrounds would be for the younger children.

But Thomas failed to get an admission from Robert W. Kenney, lawyer representing Trumbo, Maltz, Bessie, Lawson and a dozen other prosecutive witnesses that he has advised them not to answer questions about Communism and to invite prosecution.

Kenney said silkily that to require him to say what he is telling the witnesses would be an invasion of the sacred field of lawyer-client relationships.

Squirmed Out Thomas told him "You've squirmed out of this one temporarily."

"But—but—but—" he spluttered, "if the committee should determine there is a violation of the conspiracy act, we will refer it to the U. S. attorney."

"I might say the committee squirmed out of one, too," Kenney replied softly. "Neither one of us is intimidating the other. Right, Mr. Chairman?"

The crowded day brought plenty of other developments. At one point or other:

Thomas said the committee "has found more evidence of Communist activities" in Hollywood "than any other place we have ever investigated."
