BADDOUR SPEAKS AT LEGION HOME

Armistice Day Speaker Urges Reorganization Of United Nations
 Recommending the reorganization of the United Nations into "a body capable of effectively dealing with international problems and disputes," Clinton Legionnaire S. Charles Baddour declared that until such time as this goal is accomplished America must be ready to "meet force with force."
 Speaking in special American Legion Armistice Day ceremonies held at the Legion home, despite inclement weather which forced cancellation of a planned parade through the downtown sections, yesterday, Baddour, a World-War I veteran, declared that America's "strongest desire is for peace."
 He recommended, speaking for the Legion, a redistribution of power on the security council and the abolishment of the veto power on matters of aggression as improvements for the United Nations organization. He also recommended a settling of disputes by a majority vote in the world court and creation of a "tyranny-proof world police force" to enforce United Nations directives.

Universal Training

The veteran of five War I battles and five years' service in the United States, England, France, Belgium and Mexico added his voice to the American Legion's support of universal military training.
 Declaring that other countries have such military training programs and emphasizing his belief that preparedness would help prevent future war, rather than promote it, he said that "universal military training is the democratic way of sharing both responsibility and opportunity."
 During their Armistice Day ceremonies the local Legionnaires were hosts to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans and the United Spanish-American War Veterans at an Armistice Day banquet following the speech.
 Local government offices were closed yesterday, but stores re-
