YOUTH CONGRESS ASKS OUSTER OF BYRNES, BILBO

was founded upon democracy and freedom."

Paul Robeson, who sang before delegates on the second night of the conference, discussed world politics and anti-lynching. He declared it was a little absurd to worry too much about the Communist menace because "we have to get along with Communism or we might as well drop off the planet."

He said that Russians were pretty nice people for all their Communistic leanings. Robeson is now on a nationwide crusade against lynching.

Among the other resolutions adopted by the youth congress were those which:

Hailed AFL and CIO organizing drives as "distinct contributions to the welfare to the south," demanded continuance of price control, continued fight permanent fair employment practice commission, adoption of 65 cents an hour minimum wage law that includes domestic and agricultural workers, opposed compulsory militarization of American youth, a standing army of 5,000,000 men and "jim crow" units of the service, immediate withdrawal of troops from China and the Philippines, federal aid for education without discrimination to race, creed, or religion and local, state and federal steps to develop educational institutions of the south on an interracial basis, passage of federal anti-poll tax law, and strict enforcement of federal civil liberties law.

The Bilbo resolution asked that the Mississippi senator's reelection to the senate be declared 'null and void' and that he be refused a seat in the next session of congress.

In the elections for officers to head the body in 1947, Edward Weaver, 31-year-old faculty member of Alabama State Teachers college, Montgomery, was elected president to succeed Rose Mae Catchings of Nashville. Miss Catchings was named one of five vice presidents, with the others being Miss Esther V. Cooper, Birmingham, Alvin Jones, New Orleans, John Wrighten, Charleston, S. C., and Junius Scales of Greensboro, N. C., a white student from the University of North Carolina. Louis E. Burnham of Birmingham was elected executive secretary and Marinetta Steele of Fairchild, reelected treasurer.

WORLD STUDENT FUND EXECUTIVE SPEAKS AT A AND T COLLEGE

In conclusion the speaker stressed the oneness of the world today and declared that we should gladly accept the opportunity to offer our aid to these people who need it so badly.

PRINCIPAL ASKED TO EXPLAIN ABOUT FUNDS

uppe rclassmen rushed to be served at the cafeteria.

It is reported that some students refused to contribute to the current Community Chest drive, giving as their reason the fact that they never hear what happens to the money they give to various affairs at the school. In one class, only three cents was collected, it was said.

During the chapel session, Rogers was asked if the cafeteria was run by the school or by private interests. He replied that it was a school project and that all money collected went back into the place.

Some students asked this newspaper about the Federal school lunch program, whereby funds are given to schools for cafeteria purposes.

News of the proposed strike spread over the city during the week-end. Rogers could not be reached when a newspaper representative who contacted the school by phone and inquired about conditions there, but a spokesman said that nothing had developed "as yet."

It was anybody's news that students had planned to strike for better food in the school cafeteria and for a new principal. Students had said that the food is inferior and they wanted to know why they "went without" while supplies were apparently delivered to the institution. They claim that this was particularly true concerning meat.

Rogers has been the target of much criticism among the race's population, but all efforts to unseat him have failed primarily because petitions to oust him have died short of the superintendent's office and because there is a general feeling that he is too entrenched with the "powers that be."

Some time ago, students sent several unsigned letters to the Wilmington Journal.

At another time, the word "strike" appeared on blackboards of the school.

In May, mimeographed dodgers were placed in public places. These bills claimed that Rogers used high - handed methods. Strangely enough, it also said that he "tried to be white." (Rogers is light complectioned.)

charge, paid the court costs and had McAtee discharged from jail into his custody.

He said that during questioning about the saddle McAtee "made a break at me and I hit him." He said the other four defendants "hit him a few licks, I think, but I was so excited I don't know."

Officers who investigated the case said that after McAtee's death two of McAtee's stepsons admitted they had stolen the saddle from the elder Dodd.

SWORN INTO STUDENT OFFICE

DURHAM, N. C.—Charles Flowers of Wadesboro, N. C. was sworn into office as president of the North Carolina College Student Association here last Wednesday afternoon during an impressive inauguration ceremony. He was elected last week, defeating Harold Epps of Asheville.

Law School Dean Albert L. Turner administered the oath of office to President Flowers, and advised the student group to proceed cautiously in this new attempt at student government because "anything like democracy or freedom is tender in its early stages."

Flowers expressed his gratitude to the students for the honor, and called for cooperation from the entire group. He outlined as factors necessary for the success of the Student Association: cooperation, unity, individual initiative, liberalism.

He called upon the students to dismiss all traces of selfishness and think mature in terms of contributing to our advancement.

He pointed out that if caution is used in the initial steps of student government, this will form the basis for greater and more real student government. Concluding he said: "It is not necessarily the leader in any democratic group who can if is the driving power of the mass that sets the pace. If you will furnish the driving power, I have no alternative but to try to direct your drives to a mutual interpretation of success."

MIXED FINDS

Earlier a municipal court had sentenced Philip Kerlz, white, to six months in the county jail. Margaret DeGraffenreid and Col Robertson had been given three and eight months, respectively by the same court.

Judge J. A. Rousseau of the Forsyth County superior court, however, increased the sentences on each, giving Kerlz 12 months, Miss DeGraffenreid eight months, and Robertson 10 months. A fourth defendant, Miss Betty Keels Williams, convicted was found not guilty upon her testimony that she had asked the officers to let her stop and pick up the money that she had dropped when one of them seized her.

All three defendants filed notice of appeal, and their attorney asked for a mistrial on the grounds of errors during the trial.

BISHOP RANSOM RESTRAINED BY INJUNCTION

DAYTON, Ohio (NNPA) — The Rev. Reverdy C. Ransom, Bishop of the Third District of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, was restrained by injunction last Tuesday from conducting a church trial of two other bishops who charged that he sought to gain control of the entire organization.

The temporary restraining order, issued in Federal Court here and set for hearing in Cincinnati Oct. 30, was asked by Bishops David H. Sims, of Philadelphia, head of the First AME District, and William A. Fountain, of Atlanta, bishop of the Sixth District.

Bishop Ransom had intended trying the two last Wednesday on charges of "rebellion," the petition brought out.

In obtaining the restraining order, the bishops charged Bishop Ransom and nine other bishops with "maladministration through a conspiracy," and a plot to replace Bishop Sims with Bishop R. R. Wright and gain control of the First District and the entire church.

Bishop Ransom also is chairman of the board of trustees of Wilberforce University, Xenia, Ohio.
