Transfer of Maj. Day, former ediorial staff member of the Chicago Defender, is said to be the result if difference over policy between him and Marcus Ray, civilian-aide to the secretary of war, although both principals make no commen on the transfer

Newspapermen are almost unan imous in their praise for Day and criticism of Ray, who is said to b antagonistic toward members of the press. Some of them point to speech he made here a few weeks ago before a group of veterans Servicemen's day

Day is reported to disagree with Ray over the civilian aide's policy of "more intelligent Negroes for the army," a policy that caused the army to issue specia leducational re-unirements for Negroes that we quirements for Negroes that are not required for white enlistees Day is scheduled to sail from Pittsburg.
