"MA" BETHUNE, AMERICA'S LEADING EDUCATOR, FIRST LADY, SAYS WRITER 1875 in Mayesville, S. C., as the last of 17 children, and the only one to be born free. At nine, she was picking cotton in the fields. Her education began when the first free school for Negroes was established in her district. At that time, little Mary had to walk five miles each way to and from school, and at night would teach her family the things which she had learned.

A hope for more advanced education was shattered momentarily when her father's made tired and the farm had to be mortgaged to buy another animal. A little later, however, a charitable dressmaker in Denver, Mary Crissman, learned of her struggles and offered to pay for her college training. Off she went to Scotia seminary in Concord, N. C., where she was introduced to the mysteries of Latin, math, geography, and science, all the while working in the school laundry and kitchen to make ends meet.

Mrs. Bethune remembers these years at Scotia as having "broadened my horizon and given me my first intellectual contacts with white people, for the school had a mixed faculty. The white teachers taught me that the color of a person's skin has nothing to do with his brains, and that color, caste, or class distinctions are evil things." From Scotia, she took up a succession of teaching jobs, and in 1889, married a fellow teacher, Albert Bethune. It was after that this her dream of Bethune-Cookman had its start.

Further details will be announced later.

New equipment recently ordered for the hospital includes an X-ray machine, shock proof X-ray equipment and an electrocardiograph machine. All of this equipment has been badly needed for some time. Previous records of the Good Samaritan Hospital were broken in March when 100 newborn babies were delivered during the month.

U. C. EXAMINER UPHOLDS DINING CAR JIM CROW

between colored and white passengers seeking dining car service in the future. Henderson brought suit in the United States District Court for Maryland to set aside the order of the commission. That court held that the regulations did not provide for equality of treatment as required by the Interstate Commerce Act. The order of the commission was set aside and the case remanded for further proceedings. The commission on February 15, 1946, vacated its order and reopened the case.

To meet inadequacies of its regulations pointed out by the federal court, the Southern issued new regulations, providing: 1. That one seat at the left side of the aisle facing the buffet, seating four persons, shall be reserved exclusively for colored passengers and the other tables, exclusively for white passengers. 2. That before starting each meal, a curtain separating this one table from the other tables would be drawn. 3. That a "reserved" card would be kept on the Jim Crow table at all times during the meal except when it is occupied.

Johnson, 21-year-old lecturer of Cincinnati, O. The four men were bailed out as soon as they were arrested and were taken by the Rev. Charles M. Jones, local white Presbyterian minister, to his home in order to "protect them" from possible violence. Rev. Jones has caused a split in the membership of his church because of his attitude on the race question, police here said. Rev. Jones received an anonymous telephone threat to burn his house down after taking the men home with him, and police advised him to send the men out of town. The four young men, joined by other team members, left the minister's home when they learned of the threat.
