4-H CLUB YOUTHS MAKE POULTRY PAY

Raleigh — 4-H Club members of the St. Luke school in Bertie County have developed a profitable and educational enterprise from a poultry project which began on a small scale, according to B. W. Coleman, county agent for the State College Extension Service.

Beginning in February of last year, the group of eight boys and girls formed a small business group with capital of $7 each for the purpose of raising broilers to sell.

After building a modern brooder house at the school and borrowing enough money for the first year's operations, the group had paid back the loan as well as paid for the house and all the equipment before beginning this year's operations.

Mrs. John Alexander, Jr., whose marriage to Mr. John Alexander, Jr. on March 5th at Spring Hill, N. C., is shown above. A reception was given for the couple by Mr. and Mrs. Ashly Woodley of Hopswell Va. at their home in Garysburg Saturday night, June 26th, which was attended by a host of friends.

WELDON — Mrs. Mildred Fitzgerald, R. N., is visiting her friends and relatives of Garysburg and Weldon. Mrs. Fitzgerald received training at Lincoln Hospital, Durham. She has practiced nursing at Community Hospital, Norfolk, Va. and is now connected with Bronx Hospital in New York.

In March of this year, 250 barrel rock chicks were brought from one of the local hatcheries and arrangements were made for credit on the feed bill. On June 1, not a single chick had died and each of them averaged approximately three pounds, whereupon they were placed on a local market and sold for $221. The total expense for raising them was $130, therefore, a cash balance of $91 dollars as profit.

The venture was started to give the children some practical education in the things they might follow in later life," Coleman said, "as well as to teach them the spirit of cooperation."

So pleased is the group over the success they have had thus far, that plans are now underway to enlarge their facilities, so as to be able to accommodate 1,000 chicks at a time, he said.

LIBRARY TO MOVE — Raleigh — The Richard B. Harbison Library, now located at 125 E. Hargett Street, has purchased property now occupied by the Koonce Furniture company at 214 S. Blount Street for occupation on September 15, the Rev. O. S. Bullock, one of the trustees of the Library reported Thursday night.

The Rev. Bullock estimated that the building which was purchased at a cost of $19,000 will provide an increase in space of at least one third, and added: "The new site will provide two floors, whereas we have had only one."
