By JOE BISHOPDR

Washington, D.C. -- The presidential campaign has been declared a 'failure' by a committee on what the president should do. The committee's recommendations were announced today.

The committee, which is composed of five members, was appointed by the president on the advice of the Democratic National Committee. The committee's recommendations are as follows:

1. The president should resign immediately.
2. The Democratic party should nominate a new candidate for president.
3. The president should be tried for treason.
4. The president should be impeached.
5. The president should be declared insane.

The committee's recommendations are based on the president's failure to carry a single state in the election, and his failure to obtain the necessary votes in the electoral college.

The committee's recommendations were made public today at a press conference in the White House.

The committee's recommendation to resign was also announced today by the Democratic National Committee.

The Democratic party today nominated a new candidate for president, Mr. John Smith, a former member of Congress from New York.

The president's reaction to the committee's recommendations was not immediately available.

The committee's recommendations are expected to be accepted by the Democratic party. The president's failure to carry a single state in the election has caused a great deal of consternation among the Democrats.

The president has been accused of being a bad leader and of being unable to handle the problems facing the country.
