Taylor Hearing Held; Decision Awaited

MASS RAPE REVEALED

YOUNG WOMAN SNATCHED FROM BRINK OF DISASTER IN RESCUE

(Special to the CAROLINIAN) FAYETTEVILLE — A young woman, said suffering from a head ailment, is under observation here this week following an alleged suicide attempt.

Miss Pauline McKoy, whose "boy friend" reports is suffering from a "clot next to her brain", was foiled in an attempt to leap from the Cape Fear River Bridge Sunday morning when rescuers coaxed her away from a perch on a catwalk under the massive steel structure.

DON'T KNOW WHY
Questioned after she had been safely removed from the bridge, Miss McKoy, who is reportedly 27 years of age, said "I don't know why" she went onto the bridge.

ACTED STRANGELY
Indication that the woman had something in mind was first given when she hailed a cab in uptown (Continued on page 8)

COMMITTEE TO RENDER DECISION CONCERNING TAYLOR THIS WEEK

By LIN HOLLOWAY RALEIGH — The three-man committee composed of members of the N. C. State Bar who spent a full day Saturday hearing charges and defense on allegations that Raleigh Attorney Herman L. Taylor had been unethical in relations with clients, is scheduled to render its decision in the matter within the next week.

The decision of this committee will greatly influence the dynamic young lawyer's professional future in that if the findings of the committee uphold charges brought by the Bar, recommendation will possibly be made for Taylor's disbarment. On the other hand, if the charges are found unsubstantiated, Taylor will be able to continue his spirited fight for human rights throughout the area.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS

Acting as chairman of the Bar appointed committee hearing the charges brought against Taylor was Attorney Albion Dunn of Greenville, N. C., who was empaneled with Attorneys Jennings King, Laurinburg and H. M. Robins, Asheboro.

Presenting the Bar's charges against the 32-year-old lawyer, father of two children, was State Bar Secretary Edward Cannon. The charges preferred against (Continued on page 8)

4 White GIs Rape Young Race Matron

Seven GIs Sought In Criminal Attack On Mom of 2 Children

CARTHAGE — Despite failure to find facts leading to the identities of four white soldiers who raped the wife of a Negro member of the Armed Forces near here last month, the sheriff who first lifted the veil of secrecy from the case this week promises that his office will do all in its power to bring the men to justice.

Sheriff C. J. McDonald, who this week reported the mass rape, has revealed that he has been in conference with Army officials in an effort to gain a lead on the GIs involved in the atrocity.

THE ACTUAL CASE
Revelation of the case in which a young Negro was forced to watch four white men criminally assault a friend of his family was made by the local sheriff, who further revealed that Army officials contended that they were unable to aid the investigation because they would have to be picking seven men out of 100,000.

The "100,000" men referred to are members of ground and air Army units who were engaged in the mammoth maneuver Exercise Southern Pine in the area last month.

WAS LEAVING CHURCH
According to Sheriff McDonald, Mrs. Lula Mae Artes, wife of a New York soldier and mother of two children, was returning from a church event on the night of August 15 in the presence of another woman and a youthful family friend when the assault occurred.

Mrs. Artes, the other woman (Continued on page 8)

Farm Honors Accorded 5 From State

North Carolinians Win Over Entries From Five States

GREENSBORO — Five Negro youths of North Carolina have been selected over contestants of five other states to receive top honors at the 17th annual convention of New Farmers of America to be held October 1-4 at Atlanta, Ga., it was announced this week.

In addition, Frank Battle of the Philip High school community in Edgecombe County has been selected over contestants of five other states, to receive the sectional H. O. Sargent Award for his outstanding accomplishments on the farm during the last 18 years.

Battle received the Modern Farmer degree in 1938 and the Superior Farmer degree in 1943.

Youths who will receive national honors, their school, and contest division in which they were selected, are Samuel E. Williams, Henderson Institute, farm and home improvement; Robert Pullium, Davie County Training School, dairying on the home farm; Joe Odum, Catawba High School, soil and water management; Laform Bullock, George Washington Carver School at Pinetops, rural electrification, and Zan Withrow, Green Bethel High (Continued on page 8)

SHE CAN SING TOO — In addition to being a talented pianist and a "looker" as above photo indicates, Amanqa Ambrose, a St. Louis product who has been wowing audiences all over the West Coast, can also hold her own as a singer. Miss Ambrose is contemplating a national tour.

N. C. HIGH SCHOOL HEAD MAKES SPECIAL U. N. STUDY

(Special To The CAROLINIAN) WHITAKERS — A singular honor has been accorded a North Carolina High School principal by the United Nations organization and Columbia University, New York City.

The Rev. J. W. Wiley, Sr., principal of Swift Creek High School, Nash County, was — during the summer sessions at Columbia — selected one of forty-four Columbia graduates to pursue a special six-week course under sponsorship of the United Nations Committee on Education.

The purpose of the course is to formulate plans for teaching the principles of the United Nations in the public schools of the nation.

ONLY TWO NEGROES
Rev. Mr. Wiley is one of the two Negroes selected to pursue the course. He is the sole North Carolinian so honored, the other Negro being a native of Virginia.

One definite purpose of the study, it was learned, is to familiarize students of all ages with the member-nations of the U. N.

Rev. Mr. Wiley says "the principles of the United Nations must be taught to the youth of the world through the schools to be successful".

SWIFT CREEK ENROLLS 501
The Swift Creek school had an opening enrollment of 501 pupils last week despite the heavy demand for farm labor at this season of tobacco trading and cotton picking. This community, which has a substantial number of landowners, is making a conscientious effort to keep its children in school, according to Principal Wiley.

The school is making use of (Continued on page 8) visual education this year for the first time and will soon occupy four additional classrooms and a new lunchroom nearing completion. There are 145 in the high school department and the school uses five busses one of which caught fire they day we visited the school. The list of teachers is as follows: Misses Eunice Jones, Lucy Whitehead, Rosie Arrington, Mrs. Mable Williams, Dorothy R. Small, Hazel Nelson Logan, (new) Laura B. Thorpe, a native of Elberton, Ga., Mollie M. Harrison and Louise Harris. Men are R. L. Harper, James Buffinow and Richard Lucas. Lucas will handle the school's athletics.

N. C. DOCTOR, 71, FINED PLACED ON PROBATION IN NARCOTICS RAP.

By Staff Writer ROCKINGHAM — A small, greyed, 71-year-old Negro physician was accessed a fine of $500 and placed on probation for a period of two years following a hearing in Middle District Court here Tuesday in which the physician was charged with violating Federal narcotics statutes.

Fined and made a ward liable to the court was Dr. Fred D. Quick, who has been practicing medicine in this vicinity for forty years, and in view of the many statements "made in his behalf" is held in high regard throughout the area and in the profession.

Dr. Quick was specifically charged with issuing post-dated prescriptions for narcotics to two white persons he admitted he knew as dope addicts.

Dr. Quick denied allegations, however, that he was aware of the law involving narcotics prescriptions and that he realized no monetary gain from his act.

MORPHINE PRESCRIPTIONS

The aging physician was charged with giving five prescriptions for morphine sulphate to a white man resident of Lilesville, about eight miles from here. He was charged also with giving two prescriptions for a less effective drug to a white woman who lives in Cardovia, four miles from here.

In both instances, the prescriptions were post-dated, being made for consecutive days from June 6 through 10 this year.

FEDERAL MEN MOVE IN
Attention was first focused on Dr. Quick when Federal narcotics agents discovered the consecutively post-dated prescriptions at a Winston-Salem drugstore.

Just why both persons receiving the prescriptions chose to "trade with" the same drug firm and located some 100 miles away from where they received them could not be determined.

POPULARLY SUPPORTED

Dr. Quick, immaculate, soft-spoken, and confused at the charges drew popular support from local citizens, many white persons included. The white support accorded the physician prompted (Continued on page 8)

AUDITIONED BY MET—Josephine Buck, distinguished young concert singer, looms as the Negro artist who will possibly break the Metropolitan Opera's infamous Jimcrow policy. Miss Buck, who was auditioned by Dr. Boris Goldovsky, the Met's radio commentator, has received flowing praises from many sources affiliated with the Metropolitan.

SHAW UNIVERSITY OPENS WEST CAMPUS — The first load of equipment from the several administrative offices of Shaw University has been moved into the former Rex Building, acquired a year and a half ago. Moving of the offices is the first step in putting into operation the facilities of Shaw University's west campus, a block away from the 86-year-old main campus site. The Rex structure, comprising three units, provides opportunities for expansion of the institution. There are 112 rooms in the three wings of structure. The central wing, pictured above, will be used for a student center. Visible also are the corridors leading to the east wing, to serve as an administration building, and a west wing, in which the student grill will be located. A separate unit in the rear of the central wing is being converted to dormitory use and will house between 60 and 90 students.
