The institution has since grown and has turned out thousands of young men and women to make their contributions to the world in various fields of endeavor.

CAST IN BOMBING DRAMA

A witness to a recent hold-up who, police said, had rejected a bribe for his silence, was blasted to death with his wife last Tuesday in a dynamite-rigged truck. Homer Wright, 42-year-old painter, and his wife, Ophelia, 41, were blown to bits when Wright stepped on the starter of his 20-year-old truck it had been parked all night in front of Wright's home, across the street from the New Haven County jail. The explosion, felt a mile away, shattered windows throughout the neighborhood. Wright was to have been a witness in police court the Friday before the bomb deaths of the assignment of Leroy Reddick, 30, arrested as a suspect in the attempted holdup of a shoe shine parlor. Wright was working in the place when the attempt occurred. Police said a third person was arrested last week after allegedly offering Wright a bribe not to testify. The Wrights are shown top right, the blast scene and wreckage at the left, and Reddick, an ex-convict held on suspicion in connection with the explosion deaths of the Wrights, is shown at the start of questioning. Photo was taken last Wednesday afternoon upon his arrival from New York City, where he was captured last Wednesday night. With Reddick are Detectives Clarence Jacobs, left, and Detective Sergeant Joseph Scillaba. This was one of the most tragic and horrible cases in history, similar to the Moore bombings at Mims, Florida on Christmas night and have attracted nationwide attention and regret. By Interstate Press.

HIGH SOCIETY
IF ALL BIG TIME SOCIAL AFFAIRS TURN OUT LIKE THAT ONE DID THE OTHER NIGHT, I'm gonna stay at home from now on.

I guess I would have been out there if I had been in town. On weeks like that, we usually assign two reporters — one to cover the routes of interest to women, and another to cover the fights.

Talking about some loud cussing, heavy drinking and round-house bawling, Man those folks sure did put some down!

It would have been all right if the place had been some road-house about 100 miles from nowhere, and if the people involved had been section-hands, stevedores, hoboes and tramps.

But the way it went down, the site was a white night club near a residential area hired for one night's price we hear was about $500, and the people involved were lawyers, doctors, teachers, preachers, social workers, pharmacists, and businessmen. And Man, they raised Hell!

They tell me that a brand new light broke out every five minutes. That preachers and teachers were clavin' like merchant seamen and that at least one big-boson social worker pulled two handfuls of hair out of a county school teacher's head because she was dancing too close to her husband.

One big-shot business man had to take his suit to the cleaners the next morning to have it cleaned from drinking bourbon and soda when she had been accustomed to crinkling white lightning and water, and another one had to hook his watch to get some loot to take over to the place he rented his tax to pay for a big rip a chick put in it.

Bad heads were a dime a dozen in the "upper strata" the next day, and all the local drugstores sold out of Bromo Seltzer before 10 o'clock.

THE WAY I HEARD IT, a whole gang of fraternalists and sororities and other kinds of groups got together to throw this big shindig. The group in charge, I heard, were the Alphas, the Kappas, the Deltas, the Omegas, the NAACP, the WPA, the CCC, the NRA, the OPA the USO and just about every other organization except the Hargett Street Junior Bourbon Drinkers Association, Inc., of the United States of America.

They pulled a big enough bone when they hauled off and hired a white band to play the first one of their dances. When they did the same thing the next night, they should have stopped right there and dropped dead in a group.

Not satisfied with messing up that much, they had to go and give some o'fay all that loot for the use of the club and then had W proceed to act like a bunch of country people in town on Saturday.

Negro Vote Seen Factor In 2-Party Trend In Dixie

CHAPEL HILL — The increasing Negro vote in the South is a major factor in the growth of a real two-party system in this region. That is the belief of Alex Heard, an experienced political scientist, whose new book "A Two-Party South" is being published here today.

After a three-year study of Southern politics in eleven states, Heard is certain that a two-party system is coming in the South, and he is convinced that the Negro vote will hasten its development.

In the six chapters of his book devoted to Negro politics, the author points out that the destruction in 1948 of the white primary removed an historical barrier to the growth of the Southern Republican party.

"The Negro is strengthening the liberal wing of the Democratic Party in general states," Heard says. "And in doing so he is helping to make that party insatisfactory for the conservative Democrats, who already are restless and who are most likely recruits for the Southern Republican. Thus the Negro is encouraging the growth of competitive party politics in a very real way."

Professor Heard, who is on the staff of the University of North Carolina, has had extensive practical political experience and has contributed to earlier editions on Southern politics. "A Two-Party South" he presents the most detailed, up-to-date discussions available of Negro politics in this region.
