BRYANT BEST POST NO. 215 HOLDS FIRST MEETING IN ITS NEW $6000 HOME AT 231 W. FINE STREET

At the regular meeting of the Bryant Best Post No. 215 American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary on Tuesday night

IT IS AXIOMATIC that a man will serve a kind and generous master more readily and faithfully than one who is hard and stingy. Since God is infinitely good and loving, why, then, do so many men flout his will and turn their faces from him?

One reason is that many individuals have little understanding of God's great love for them. It may be that some would continue to offend God even though convinced of His claim to affection and loyalty. But most men tend to find in the reality of God's love a challenge to what is highest and noblest in their nature.

Meditation on His marvelous works and manifold interest in the welfare of humankind is one way to evoke an inspiring love of God. Another is to study the Bible which chronicles the manner and ways in which God has encompassed mankind with His mercy and compassion. Yet another is to study the lives of other beings whose love for God inspired them to scale the heights of spiritual perfection.

A St. Paul or a St. Augustine can teach more perhaps about God than any formal theological treatise. Other great and holy men have lived lives which demonstrated how wonderfully God can exalt and exonerate even the humblest of His servants. The history of Christianity is replete with the names of weak and trembling human beings whose faith in God has carried them through heart-breaking obstacles to great accomplishments.

Reading of such things, one must pause to reflect: A God who is so mighty and powerful and yet so loving and condescending merits indeed to be served in all reverence.

Many inquiries are being received regarding the use of Krillium for soil improvement. This material is a soil conditioner and not a fertilizer. It can transform tight lumpy soils into friable soils in much the same way that decomposing organic matter does. While no claims are made that Krillium has fertilizer value, the improvement of soil physical condition resulting from its use may cause the plant nutrients of soils as well as those of added fertilizer to be more efficient in promoting plant growth.

Although the introductory price of the material is high, it should be suited for the preparation of potting soils, the green house production of flowers and vegetables, and use in home flower and vegetable gardens located on heavy, difficult-to-work soils. For preparing potting soil, one ounce of Krillium should be mixed with 100 pounds of soil. For garden plots, Krillium should be mixed thor-

Elks' Bill On Education Issue Before US Congress

WASHINGTON — This will not be sensational reading like the race for Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks or a juncy divorce, but this is about one of the most important material developments for the welfare of Negroes in the past quarter-century.

A bill to wipe out adult illiteracy through a Federal Adult Education Program sponsored by the Department of Education of the House and a similar bill in the Senate.

Presentation of the bills by Congressman B. Carroll Reece, (R. Tenn.) and Senator Harley M. Kilgore, (D. West Va.) was the climax of a long range program begun by the Elks when Judge William C. Houston of Washington was Grand Commissioner of the I.E.P.O.W. It reached its high point late in 1951 upon the accession of Lieut. George W. Lee of Memphis, Tenn., to Judge Houston's post.

In cooperation with the U. S. Office of Education and state departments of education, the Elks Department of Education began amassing data and complete statistics on the alarming picture which had been keenly spotlighted by the rejection of enough Selective Service inductees on grounds of illiteracy, according to Senator Kilgore, "have made sixty Army divisions."

In December 1951, with the blessing of the late Grand Exalted Ruler J. Finley Wilson, Lieut. Lee presented his materials to his fellow Tennessean, Congressman

ACROSS the DESK

AT SOME TIME or other, every weekly newspaper editor has found himself in hot water because of some "story" he published or did not publish. E. W. Lauck, editor of the Page News and Courier, Luray, Virginia, recently had such difficulties. This is his editorial reply to his critics, entitled "Publishing the News":

"If a newspaper could be run by publishing only the news meeting the approval of those concerned it would be wonderful. But unfortunately a newspaper like that can't be run—except into the ground. It's no wonder, therefore, that we find ourselves in somewhat of a predicament once in a while when we are requested not to publish a story which manifestly is already public gossip rather than an authenticated statement.

"Therefore we hope we do not make too many people mad when we publish the news as we see it. It is just that this is what we are paid for."

I Haven't Got Time

From the Herington Advertiser-Times, Herington, Kansas:

"How often do you hear the statement today that 'I haven't got time'? It is offered as an explanation for failure to vote, for failure to attend meetings on governmental issues, for failure to write to legislators about important bills.

"This is a new excuse in our country, a development of recent years. In fact, if it weren't a new excuse, we wouldn't have a country. There wouldn't be a United States of America—for the first Americans somehow found time to form our nation and fight a war for independence. They found time even though they were all busy men.

"Benjamin Franklin was a printer and scientist; Paul Revere, a merchant; Patrick Henry, a lawyer; George Washington, a surveyor and planter; Thomas Paine, a writer. These are just a few examples. Most of the founding fathers were farmers, businessmen or professional men. All of them could have said they were 'busy'—and proved that statement—if they had wanted to use such an excuse to avoid taking part in the American Revolution.

"If they could find time to win freedom for us, we can surely find time to preserve this inheritance."
