TOP PROBLEM

have received for the art courses because the superintendent of schools said to suspend with the services of the art teacher and no replacement was made. Notwithstanding the fact that there are several talented students in the school who need this type of preliminary training from an appraisal of the courses to be offered at the Washington school next fall, no provision whatever has been made for a resumption of art studies.

If our information is correct and we believe it is, it appears that in both of these instances rank discrimination and inequality are being practiced in the case of the suspension of art courses. We feel that the principal of the school has been and is being negligent, careless and indifferent to the needs of his students. When you are made aware of the specialized art training offered at the Needham Broughton High school and compare that with all the abandonment of even the taken art courses at the Washington school, and all of this without a single word of protest from the Washington school head, you don't have to wonder why we as a group remains far behind other groups. Those who are paid high salaries to protect and advance our interest are in too many instances indifferent to any interest save their own. Although the Association felt that these cases were areas in which the school principals should exercise jurisdiction, inasmuch as they had not and apparently had no intention of doing so, Reverend Paul H. Johnson, the Association president promised to take the matter over and make a personal investigation of the facts.

The Committee on Adequate Hospital Facilities decided the remain on duty for the summer and to continue its exploratory work with the idea of having a concrete plan of action ready by September.

The proper name for the new Negro high school, now under construction came up for consideration. It is an acknowledged fact that this school came into being as a result of the untiring efforts of the Negro Citizens Committee, under the leadership of the then chairman, the late Reverend M. W. Williams. Because of this, the Association, which by the way had its name changed from Negro Citizens Committee to the Raleigh Citizens Association through the influence of some elements within the Committee who abhorred the name Negro; it was considered fitting and proper that the new school bear the name of Rev. Williams, coupled with the name of the late Reverend Ligon, who like Reverend Williams, gave his very life to the unselfish cause of advancement for our people. A committee was appointed to present the name, Williams-Ligon High School to the Raleigh School Board together with reasons which prompted the choice.

The Association was at a loss in trying to understand what or who caused the present high school to be named the George Washington High school. When you consider the fact that George Washington, a slave owner, did not want Negroes to go to any type of school, to say nothing about a high school for them, it does appear rather ridiculous for us to have a school named for him.

proud of his full head of hair, even though it is thinning a bit at the top.

With six of his twelve children still living, he has fifteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Doc Broadnax lost his sight last fall, but regained it a few weeks later, and can now see fairly well. His hearing is also quite good.

Doc believes his longevity is due to a good appetite, eating wholesome food, and chewing slowly and well. Yes, he smokes and drinks, but only a little at a time. The smoking habit he acquired about 36 years ago.

PARKED BY VICTIM OF SHOOTING TRAGEDY—NEVER TO BE USED BY OWNER AGAIN. When Robert Alexander Edwards, Jr., 15, rode to work last Sunday and parked his bicycle in a corner of the locker room of the swimming pool at Chavis Park, only later could have been aware of this by the reason of which he has lost his citizenship. "2. That W. A. Manley cannot read and write, and consequently is not qualified in law to register, vote, or be a candidate in any primary election."

Manley called for a second primary on the post of Morehead constable after his opponent, Thomas L. Turner, winning 2,780 votes, failed to achieve a majority over him and a third candidate in the May 31 primary.

The candidate has sought public office in several elections. In the last Guilford County sheriff's election primary, he ran and was defeated.
