... from the Woman's Angle

DELTAS AID COLLEGE LIBRARY IN INDIA—When Miss Dorothy I. Height recently left the United States for India to work as a guest college professor for the YWCA, Delta Sigma Theta sorority contributed to the library fund of the University of Delhi. Miss Height, who is national president of the Deltas, is currently teaching at the university's school of Social work. She will be in Cleveland, Dec. 26-30 to preside over the sorority's national convention. The sorority also met in conjunction with the American Council on Human Rights at that time. In the above picture Miss Height and members of the [illegible] administrative committee are shown in the headquarters of the foreign division of the YWCA as they make their sorority's gift to the library of the University of Delhi. Shown left to right are: Miss Thurston Hicks, St. Louis; Dorothy Height, Washington, D. C.; Miss [illegible] Nashville, Tenn.; Albert Hartley, Philadelphia; Mrs. [illegible] courtier director, foreign division of YWCA; Dorothy [illegible] Okla.; Pauline Weeden [illegible]burg, Va.; Miss [illegible] Mary Log Tolbert, Los Angeles; Mattie Greenwood, Atlanta; Beatrice Penman, Kansas City, Kan. (presenting check to Miss Height); Actie Lee Henderson, Houston, Texas; Gwendolyn Hughes, Bluefield, W. Va.; M. Lavia Gamey, Atlanta; Robert S. Cann, Cincinnati, O. and Jane Hamilton, Chicago. (NNPA)

Fashion Trends

by Freddye S. Henderson

[illegible] YORK—M[illegible] have you noticed how some homemakers always seem to get jobs done well and with a minimum of effort? The secret? Well more times than not the lady who does not work most efficiently is the one who follows a work plan or sense[illegible] of some sort.

The very words "work plan" might scare some women off but actually these plans should be very basic and simple and when properly planned and followed, they can make your daily and weekly housechores take much easier. For instance the work to be done around the house might be divided as follow:

1. Jobs to be done every day like [illegible]making, washing dishes and cooking meals.

2. The weekly tasks, such as ironing and mending, and doing the laundry.

3. Occasional tasks waxing and caring for floors, cleaning out and setting closets to rights, straightening up bureau and desk drawers, preserving food, caring for rugs and curtains.

Of course every schedule will be an individual matter and should be planned with your own home, family and your particular needs in mind. Your standard of living will be important, too, in working out a workable schedule. If you do much entertaining, you may want to allow time for extra preparations. But with more and more women being found in offices today, you may be able to subtract your time and do some of your party baking ahead of time so that the last few hours before the guests arrive needn't be spent frantically stirring up pastries in the kitchen.

And of course a successful plan for housework must be flexible. There are always unexpected interruptions to be coped with and a work plan should be made that won't be thrown out of balance by unexpected visitors or circumstances.

—BFC—

Feminine Fashion Flair

A.N.P.

[illegible] you haven't [illegible] Even if we can't get [illegible] every time we'd like to, it would be nice if we knew the [illegible] on pictures well enough to recognize what is being worn and [illegible] where.

One of the first things we will probably see is a new spring hat. I do not know why it is, but we women just love to wear those delicious spring numbers with a new hat. They do look pretty [illegible] When the days are dull and cold, a colorful spring [illegible] seem to freshen our outfits.

Here's what you'll be seeing first in the millinery market.

The first color threesome will be burnished gold, deep chocolate brown and black in a variety of combinations. These regal colors will be seen in satins straws and silk jersey, the two fabrics and straw sometimes being used in one hat.

Jade and deep gold and deep brown in dull satin as drapped trimming on pale almond straw with a small touch of black jet. Jade accents black satin draped [illegible] crowns on light gold straw, deep chocolate brown [illegible] black in all satin hats trimmed with black and burnished gold are some of the combinations significant in these early spring hats.

There will be pretty little feminine hats. One milliner believes that a pretty trimming will make a more feminine hat. Clever [illegible] ribbons and bits of veiling will make the smaller hats [illegible]

Color also registers effectively in many of the straw and soft fabric silhouettes. Along with those [illegible] enthroned, there will be orange with soft pink nasts; pale [illegible] graved blue and green a great deal of bright orange red and many two-tone combined, striped [illegible] checked combinations.

There is a Coronation twist to most of the spring hats in London, and I'm sure we will get a taste of them here too. Styles are based on Elizabethan themes, ducal strawberry leaves in straw or velvet.

The basic silhouette is small, flat and worn straight on the head—a shape that fits with coronet themes. There are some forward shapes with big bonus in flattering heart shaped curves and a few deep cloches. White satin and pastel velvet are also big. I need not ask if you like what will be seen in the millinery mirror. That's one picture we always admire . . . especially if it's feminine!

—BFC—

FASHION-OF-WEEK

PERFECT for season-skipping through winter and spring is this rayon and acetate flannel original of Fashion Frocks of Cincinnati. The eggshell dickey is studded with jewel-like buttons for dressy affairs but it can be removed and the neckline dressed with scarves for sports wear. Sold in homes by [illegible] representatives. (ANP)

CAMERA SIZES THE DRESS

The camera made its first tintype in the 18th century. It's been busy accompishing many things since, from the depth of deep-sea pictures to the heights of aerial photography. Its latest magic is the role it plays in the Pro-Ray process. Here the camera uses a specially-built lens to translate misses' styles into half size proportions. What a blessing for those who wear half sizes! We now have the youthful fashions we've wanted but have never been able to find in our size.

The person who dreamed up this bit of miracle is Esther Hayes, a vivacious young woman femininely curvacious and a bit on the short side, who wears a half size. She says her venture came about because of two childhood hobbies. As a youngster she was avidly sewing clothes for her dolls or trotting about the community snapping pictures with a dollar box camera. In later years, however, as she studied art and attended designing school, sewing became her profession, but photography filled her spare time.

Esther Hayes decided that to best fill the fashion needs of half size figures throughout the country, she would start a mail-order business. Since then so many people in search of well-fitting apparel have written to ask their correct size that she has set up a department to handle this information. Anyone writing to Esther Hayes, 465 Fifth Avenue, New York 17, N. Y., giving hip, waist, bust and length measurements, will be correctly sized.

The clime of Hayes Half Size Fashions now flourishes because a young woman was a half size figure and a camera fiend, and had enough ingenuity to combine these two divergent factors into a single unique invention.

State College's HINTS TO HOMEMAKERS

Miss Ruth Current

State Home Demonstration Agent

PLANNED HOUSEWORK. Have you noticed how some homemakers always seem to get jobs done well and with a minimum of effort? The secret? Well more times than not the lady who does not work most efficiently is the one who follows a work plan or sense[illegible] of some sort.

The very words "work plan" might scare some women off but actually these plans should be very basic and simple and when properly planned and followed, they can make your daily and weekly housechore tasks much easier. For instance the work to be done around the home might be divided as follow:

1. Jobs to be done every day like dishwashing, washing dishes and cooking meals.

2. The weekly tasks, such as ironing and mending, and doing the laundry.

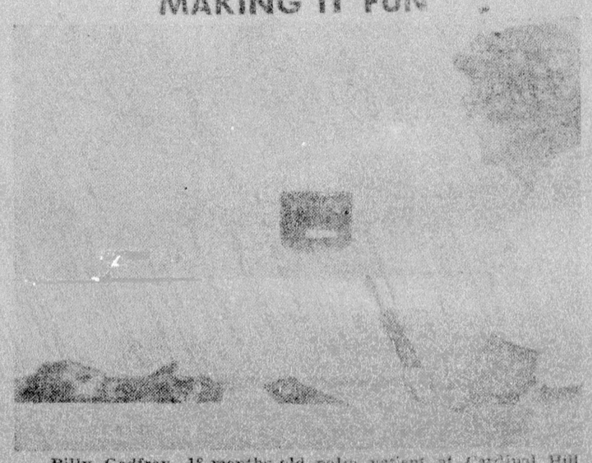
3. Occasional tasks waxing and caring for floors, cleaning out and setting closets to rights, straightening up bureau and desk drawers, preserving food, caring for rugs and curtains.

Of course every schedule will be an individual matter and should be planned with your own home, family and your particular needs in mind. Your standard of living will be important, too, in working out a workable schedule. If you do much entertaining, you may want to allow time for extra preparations. But with more and more women being found in offices today, you may be able to subtract your time and do some of your party baking ahead of time so that the last few hours before the guests arrive needn't be spent frantically stirring up pastries in the kitchen.

And of course a successful plan for housework must be flexible. There are always unexpected interruptions to be coped with and a work plan should be made that won't be thrown out of balance by unexpected visitors or circumstances.

—BFC—

MAKING IT FUN



Billy Godfrey, 18-months-old polio patient at Cardinal Hill Hospital, Lexington, Ky., finds bath time can be play time too. Bathing a patient is but one of the many jobs performed in a day by Mrs. Robert Lusk, Polio Emergency Volunteer, shown with Billy. "You Can Help, Too" by a gift to the January March of Dimes which will enable the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to continue its programs of patient care, research and education.

HONORED BY 4-H CLUBBERS—Three retired Extension workers and one land-grant college president were given meritorious service awards by the 4-Hers during the Regional Camp at Tuskegee. Director M. L. Wilson (right) is shown with R. H. Brown of Penn., T. J. Jarden, who retired as assistant state agent in Louisiana after 38 years, and Miss M. L. Toomer of Georgia. Dr. John W. Davis, president of West Va. State College, was unable to be present to receive his award. (Newspress Photo.)

Helen G. Edmonds Is Delta Speaker

WASHINGTON [illegible] Alpha Phi Sigma Chapter of [illegible] sorority, Inc. [illegible] to guest meeting Dr. [illegible] Edmonds of First Baptist [illegible] 11, 4 p.m.

Dr. Edmonds, noted author, historian and professor of [illegible] Durham, is second his[illegible] "The Life and [illegible] Shepard." [illegible] she is [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]