- (9) Patients are not to be put on.
(10) Conversation should be quiet and actions subdued.
(11) Freed rest, nursing care and other efforts for treating the patient should not be evaluated and criticized to the patient which gives him a sense of insecurity.
(12) Visitors should plan to come on other than Sundays and holidays for the crowds on those days do the patient more harm than good in many cases.

PREDICTS HIGH LEVEL ECONOMY

AMERICAN business faces its greatest responsibility in history to maintain a high level of production that will provide full employment and an ever-rising standard of living for the American people, according to James J. Nance, president, Packard Motor Car Company. The nation has successfully achieved a dual economy — high production of both defense and civilian goods — as a result of the past 13 years of war and defense preparation. He said international developments need not materially alter this basic situation.

Addressing the recent convention of the Advertising Federation of America, Nance, one of the nation's leading industrialists, called for "dynamic distribution" as the link between production and the public, and the only assurance the nation has to sustain the present unimpaired economy. Nance last month was named "business statesman of the year" for his accomplishments in returning Packard, once the foremost producer of fine cars, to the luxury car field with its line of Packard cars and custom limousines, and in expanding the company's operations to keep pace with changing marketing conditions.

The public is best served by a market in which employment and income are high so that people have buying power and at the same time production is also high and unrestrained by shortages, he said. Such a market can be kept in balance only by actual demand creation. The automobile executive said he was convinced that the shade of business income devoted to advertising, promotion, merchandising and marketing research will have to be increased.

JAMES J. NANCE, President, Packard Motor Car Company, Detroit.

Suggestions On Visits To Hospital Patients Listed

RALEIGH. — There are certain rules relative to visiting patients at hospitals which must be adhered to if the well-being of the patient and the conduct of the business of the hospital is taken under consideration.

The rules concerning visits at Saint Annes Hospital here tend to point up the means which not only the patient and the hospital but also the visitor himself may make the best of his calls to see patients.

The medical and administrative staffs of Saint Annes Hospital request that the following observations and suggestions be given thoughtful consideration by all callers.

Visitors of all kind and descriptions come to the hospital daily to see their relatives and friends or just to look around. No matter who the visitor may be nor the nature of his visit, he should be treated with courtesy and consideration. Visitors must never be antagonized but given such consideration as would make them friends of the hospital.

Visitors are divided into three classes: next of kin, relatives and friends, casual callers and survivors.

Visitors should be tactfully, courteously and firmly excluded. The survivor type of visitor is motivated by a sense of duty of looking over the hospital. A hospital is no place for the curiosity seeker and he should stay at home or elsewhere. If, however, he wishes to become better acquainted with the hospital he should make his wishes known to the administrator who would be pleased to show him around and tell him about every department.

In order to assist the patient and their recovery at Saint Annes Hospital, a few helpful suggestions might be the following:

- (1) No more than two visitors should be at the patient's bedside at any one time — preferably one if the patient is very sick or just out of surgery.
(2) The visit should be guided to the patient's need, sometimes five minutes or a little longer is all that is necessary to make the patient happy and encourage him on the way to recovery.
(3) The visitor should always get permission from the main office and find out the location and condition of the patient.
(4) The nurse on each floor will advise the caller of the patient's condition and suggest the length of visit.
(5) The visitor should never tell even though some present and the patient and or disturbing news problems to the nursing staff and but rather enter upon items of administration. The casual visitor interest and add to his mental is another problem alleviator and comfort.
(6) Food should never be given to a patient unless the matter has been first cleared with the nurse in charge for most of the patients are on special diets as ordered by their physicians as treatment for their condition.
(7) A book or other appropriate gifts are preferable to large bouquets of flowers.
(8) Patients, especially children and babies, are not to be handled and usually get along much better and recover faster without seeing their parents so often.

A summer sandwich you make almost as quick as a wink is this one: Spread slices of fresh whole-wheat bread with sandwich spread, then with flaked tuna. Simple, yes! But very, very good.

If Junior's careless with his lemonade glass and spots your best table, here is how to remove the white ring. Moisten a cloth with a few drops of ammonia or spirits of camphor and rub the spot.

Now that beef prices have dipped, we can dig into a big juicy steak more often. Next time you cook one try this: In a saucepan melt vitaminized margarine, then stir into it a bit of dry mustard, a dash of salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce. Pour into the steak platter or chop plate. When steak is broiled, quickly coat it with the margarine sauce, first on one side then the other. Utterly delicious!

Flowers will stay fresh longer if, immediately after cutting or receiving them from the florist, you trim the stems and immerse up to the blossom in cold water. Leave in a dark cool place for two or three hours. By the way, if you can't spare that much time, remember 15 or 20 minutes is better than not at all.
