The bones of Ernest Hardy of Greenville was found by a hunter in the Indian Well swamp near the S. O. Worthington farm in Swift Creek Township. The man had been missing from the home of a daughter, who lived nearby since February 9, 1952. He had been visiting and had left the residence and was never seen again. Mrs. Nora Hardy, the dead man's wife, made a positive identification, based on his teeth, a weatherbeaten pair of shoes and scraps of clothing found at the site, along with the
