Mixed Ministerial Body Moving Up

State News Brief

TAXI STORY SAID FALSE

RALEIGH — Reports that the parking space allotted City Taxi Company, Raleigh's oldest cab company, had been abolished and the cabs ordered to find other parking spaces, have been labeled inaccurate by officials of the company and city officials. A story was allegedly going the rounds that the taxi firm was being moved from the location which it has held since the turn of the century. William Laws and Edward Sheehan, co-owners of the firm, expressed surprise when approached by a CAROLINIAN newsmen relative to the move. The company is still doing business at its same address.

Judge Says Dixie Courts Are Fair

JACKSONVILLE — After Shelby Brown of New Jersey was cleared of manslaughter charges in Onslow Superior Court here last week, Judge Richard Bundy suggested that when he returned home he should "tell other Northern Negroes" that he received as "fair a trial as any other man." Brown had been charged in connection with the death of a woman who reportedly fell from his car. After he was acquitted for lack of evidence, Judge Bundy made the suggestion. "And I hope the NAACP hears of this," he said.

Kentucky Points Way In School Integration

COLUMBIA, Ky.—First court-ordered integration in this state became a reality here on Monday when 17 Negro pupils attended classes at the Adair County Consolidated High School. Integration at the county's only high school was ordered by Federal Judge Mac S. Winford after he and two other Federal judges had heard an injunction suit requesting immediate integration. He set Feb. 1 as a deadline, but since the second semester began on Monday, the time was advanced voluntarily. Judge Winford also ruled that the county's elementary schools should be integrated no later than next August or September. Of the county's approximately 3,300 pupils, 103 are Negroes. Principal Joe Jones, in welcoming the students, indicated that "it's just another day's work for me," and a bus driver summed it up by saying: "Everybody that gets on my bus will be treated the

White Parachutist Owes Life To Buddy

FT. CAMPBELL, Ky.—Quick thinking on the part of Pvt. Leslie Smith, of Cleveland, Ohio, a paratrooper here, was credited with saving the life of Sgt. James Glosson when the latter's parachute failed to open during airborne maneuvers here last Wednesday. As Sgt. Glosson flashed past, Smith got a desperate hold on Glosson's parachute and both men landed safely. Brig. Gen. Joe Stilwell, Jr. commander of the 11th Airborne Division, promoted Smith to private first class on the spot.

Do-Drop-In Padlocked After Raid

BURGAW — Police last Thursday padlocked a Pender County "Juke Joint," described as a breeding ground for "murder and a host of other crimes," following a raid led by District Solicitor John J. Burney of Wilmington and Sheriff L. E. Howard. The Do-Drop-In, owned and operated, according to court order, by Haywood and Evelyn Banerman, is located in the Calico Bay section of the county, and, according to Sheriff Howard, has long been a hotbed of trouble. The raid and closing of the establishment was brought about by a mistrial in Pender Superior Court in which Clarence Pickett, 19, was charged with the murder

NC Must Pay $3,000 For Eleanor's Death

RALEIGH — Overriding a Highway Commission appeal, the State Industrial Commission last Thursday ruled that $3,000 damages should be paid to Mrs. Geneva Gould of Albemarle for the death of her daughter, Miss Eleanor Rush at Woman's Prison the night of August 20, 1954. The commission upheld its examiner's findings that Miss Rush was the victim of negligence on the part of state prison employees. The 18-year-old young woman died in an isolation cell after she had been gagged and bound by I. D. Hinton, then superintendent, and four guards. The examiner, Hugh M. Currin, of Oxford, had held that it was "evident that Hinton failed to give Eleanor Rush the protection and care required by the law." Currin found that Miss Rush died

Married Man Shot, Single Woman Held

HENDERSON — After reportedly admitting the fatal shooting of Sylvester Richardson, 35, about 8 a.m. on Saturday, Miss Martha Higgs was placed in jail without bail and charged with his death. Highway Safety Drive Launched By Weekly

RALEIGH — This week THE CAROLINIAN is happy to print messages from four leaders in government, politics and highway safety: Governor Luther Hodges, Col. James R. Smith, Edward Scheidt and Raleigh's Mayor Fred Wheeler. These messages are aimed at reducing the shocking number of accidents and fatalities on the state's highways during 1956. Last year North Carolina set an all-time record in the number of deaths on its highways. This record could have been avoided if motorists had obeyed all of the traffic laws completely. The messages listed on page 11, 12 and 13 of this edition are sponsored by the firms listed on those pages, in cooperation with this publication.

ODDS-ENDS

By ROBERT G. SHEPARD

In the coming race for the Wake County Senate seat in the 1957 legislature, the only difference between the two men who have already announced for the post, so far as Negroes are concerned, is twiddle-dee and twiddle-dum. The two who have entered the race are, incumbent Sen. James M. Poyner and Martin K. Green. Mr. Poyner is an attorney and Mr. Green is a local businessman and a member of the Raleigh City Council.

In making his announcement that he is seeking the Senate post, Mr. Green openly admits that one of the issues of his campaign will be what he calls the "great social question of our time." He then defines this great social question as the public school integration issue, saying that "our schools have developed into social institutions."

Green seems to feel that Gov. Hodges has done a remarkable job in the segregation battle for he says in his announcement that "the governor cannot do the job alone—he has been everlastingly right in his efforts to approach the matter calmly, fairly and with dignity."
