Dixie Solons' Trick Delays Civil Rights

BY ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON (ANPR) —

Through shrewd parliamentary maneuvering the smooth operating Southern politicians pulled a "slick trick" in the House Rules Committee last Thursday in an effort to further delay action on civil rights legislation.

The committee has previously voted to hold a two-day hearing on the civil rights measure, after which a vote would be taken to determine whether the bill should be reported to the House Floor for action.

The committee had agreed to devote one full day to hearings proponents of the measure and a second day to the opposition.

Rep. Howard Smith of Virginia, chairman of the committee, got off to a late start on Thursday, calling the committee to order at 10:45, and announcing that 18 witnesses had requested to be heard. He stated that he didn't know whether the committee would have time to hear all of the witnesses since it had ruled to vote before 6:00 p.m.

The first witness, Rep. E. L. Forrester of Georgia, consumed the entire morning, ranting against civil rights. At the conclusion of his testimony the committee adjourned for lunch.

Don't Have Quorum Immediately following the lunch period, Rep. Edward Willis of Louisiana took the stand. About half way through his testimony Rep. William Colmer of Mississippi, a member of the Rules Committee, interrupted to ask whether there was a quorum present.

Chairman Smith took a count. Finding that there were only five members present, he adjourned the hearings for the lack of a quorum.

With this movement the chairman and his Mississippi colleague walked out of the committee without further explanation.

It was learned that one member of the committee had asked the chairman to be excused for a half-hour to keep

Raleigh Man Is Sentenced For Shooting

Pistol shootings here, over the weekend resulted in a baby being treated at St. Agnes Hospital and Leroy Utley being sentenced to 12 months on the roads of Wake County.

Two-year-old Charles Edward Taylor was left in the house by his mother, Mrs. Taylor, while he took a nap. Upon returning to the house located at 531 Davis St., Mrs. Taylor found the child bleeding from the scalp.

Both shootings caused quite a stir in the neighborhood, due to the fact that the identity of the person who shot the child has not been established. It is still a mystery as to how and by whom he was shot. Officer W. F. Crocker, who had been called to investigate another shooting says that he was hailed by the child's mother and aided in getting the child to the hospital.

Utley is said to have become enraged while having a drink in the kitchen of the home of Mrs. Lena Dover, 305 S. East Street, with James Dover and others. The CAROLINIAN

Wholesale Firings At S. C. College

ORANGEBURG, S. C. — At least 15 students at S. C. State College here have been asked "not to return" next fall and a half dozen faculty members have not had their contracts renewed, it was revealed here this week.

Observers see in these two incidents reprisals against students who took part in the anti-segregation strike last April and against faculty members who are thought to have sympathized with their cause.

Secretary W. C. Belcher of the board of trustees said that the students had been notified after the end of the school term, so "they were not expelled." He said further that three faculty members did not get renewed contracts and that "several others" had said that they did not want theirs renewed.

NAACP Probe Pending Investigation of alleged NAACP activities at the college, said Belcher, will begin "soon." The inquiry has been pending for more than a month since the legislature authorized it.

In New York last week, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D. N.Y.) intro-

ODDS-ENDS

By ROBERT G. SHEPARD

The Tot Haven Nursery, now located in the Mary Talbert Home on E. Davis St., is seeking new quarters because of inadequate sanitary facilities at the Davis Street location. The nursery must move in order to conform to health and sanitary provisions of the County and State boards of health. The nursery board of directors is hopeful that a suitable location can be secured by September first in order that this vital and needed project may be continued.

Since it began its operation, many years ago, the Tot Haven Nursery has provided supervised care for the small children of working mothers, thereby relieving these mothers of the dreadful anxiety of wondering what was happening to their unprotected children while they were away from them. The need for the con-
