Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, Chicago, Ill., president, Na-tional Association of Colored Women, told how the work of the NAACP and Martin Luther King had inspired every woman to be up and doing for the cause of citizenship. Mrs. William T. Mason, Norfolk, Va., president, National Council of Negro Women, joined her in words of sincerity and a call to action. The Rev. Thomas J. Kilgore, Jr., New York, read the litany. He displayed the same fight and determination that he exemplified when he headed the State Baptist Convention.

Dr. Mordecai Johnson lost no words, gestures or poise as he called upon the crowd to back the NAACP. He implored God to give the crowd the strength to fight for its rightful place and made it clear that the Negro was on the march and invited all freedom-loving Americans to join the fight against southern intolerance and northern pussy-footing. "We want America and the world to know that we will fight for the NAACP and are ready to die to obtain our freedom," said the educator. He warned the huge crowd to approach the whole matter with praying hearts and humble attitudes and above all to love everybody and hate no one.

Dr. William H. Borders, Atlanta, Ga., told of the resurgence that has taken place in Georgia and called upon the government to come to the rescue of the thousands of defenseless people of color in his state and the sympathizing whites who have shown concern over the whole matter. Rev. C. K. Movie producers are reported to be favorably impressed that in the United States itself the Negro audience, more important now than in the past to a picture's success, has shown it welcomes films with racial themes and mixed casts, while remaining indifferent to all-Negro productions.

Mr. Stellings cited the example of Lena Horne to show how Negro

Metro-Goldwyn Mayer has been unable to book "Edge of the City" starring Sidney Poitier throughout the South because it portrays the developing friendship between a Negro and white dockworker. White Citizens Council recently began a campaign to ban the showing of "Island in the Sun" in which Harry Belafonte and Joan Fontaine are starred, the locale being

The story will expose the cruelty of an European bigot in Africa, with Poitier cast as the African leader working for the equality of his people.
