Ligon High Honor Society Installs New Officers

"Leadership role is in an age marked by a cultural mediocrity threat" was the topic used by Dr. Anne Tolliver as she spoke at the J. W. Ligon High School Wednesday afternoon.

The program was held by Ligon's National Honor Society for the installation of its new officers. Delcie Johnson led the list of new officers, taking over the presidency from Armayne Dunston. Other new officers were Mary Upperman, vice president; Robbie Debnam, secretary; Wilton Smith, assistant secretary; Juan Coe, treasurer and Robert Williams, reporter.

Dr. Tolliver, head of the department of English at St. Augustine's College indicated that radio and television does not enlighten now, but entertain and commercialize. She further implied that literature has felt the threat of mediocrity, but on the bright side, there is evidence that the intelligence of people is higher than it appears. "We make use of paper backs-noted work that will give us literature in its best form."

The speaker indicated that music reaching out of its position of mediocrity has a receptive public and creative dance groups have gained superiority rather than cultural mediocrity.

In her summary Dr. Tolliver asked the audience, "How can the challenge be met?" "What is my role?" She answered with three main points. "Get the best possible education. "Set for yourself high goals and move steadfastly toward them"; and "Build your life around high ethical values."
