Man, Wife Renege On Donkey Show

A 33-year-old white matron, who with her husband was held in Wake County Jail on charges of false pretense, was released in $500 bond this week while her husband remained in prison under $1,500 bond.

Released was Mrs. Millie M. Frech, who with her husband Royster George, 36, was arrested last week on charges of false pretenses in connection with the promotion of a donkey basketball game here to be sponsored by the Elks.

The warrants charge Frech and her husband with the promotion of a donkey basketball game here to be sponsored by the Elks.

The game was to be staged in the auditorium last Wednesday night, however, Det. Capt. R. E. Goodwin said investigation showed neither Frech nor his wife had rented the auditorium.

Police said the arrests were prompted by a complaint from John Williams, Jr., financial secretary of the Elks Lodge. Williams told officers he became suspicious when the day of the game rolled around and no donkeys had arrived in Raleigh.

MUST FACE CAROLINA TRIAL — The Curahosa County Court of Appeals in Cleveland, O., ruled last week that Mrs. Willie Mae Mallory must be returned to North Carolina to face charges of kidnapping a white couple during a racial disturbance at Monroe last August. Mrs. Mallory said in her jail cell that she had expected the action. She has contended that the white couple was taken into the home where she was staying to protect them from angry Negroes during the disturbance. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

Attacked At Knifepoint By Youth

Raleigh police have the net out for a Negro male in his early 20's for questioning in connection with the alleged rape of a 50-year-old woman Tuesday night.

Police described the man as being about 5'7" with a brown complexion and processed hair.

Police say this man attacked Mrs. Hattie Jones, of 20 W. Worth St. on Tuesday evening.

Lack Of Jobs For Negroes Concerns All

"The problem requires our biggest minds and biggest hearts" With this statement, Gov. Terry Sanford expressed his concern about the lack of employment opportunity for North Carolina Negroes.

The statement was issued from the Governor's office Tuesday. In his statement, Sanford also said that the "inability of the qualified Negro to find adequate employment drags down the economy of the entire state."

"This problem has long been on the conscience of many people of the state," the Governor said, "but we can be sure it is also a detrimental force on our joint and many efforts to raise the economy of the state."

Sanford backed up his contention with the latest statistics on per capita income in the state. The State ranked 42nd among the 50 states in per capita income in 1961. "If we counted the income of only white citizens, we would rank 32nd instead of 42nd," Sanford said.

The Bureau of Census reported the State's average per capita income in 1961 at $1,640. Informal statistics indicate that the average per capita income among whites is over $2,300 while the Negro average is less than $900.

In his statement Tuesday, Sanford said the problem "is not the problem of the government as much as it is the problem of all citizens."

The Durham decision came just one day before the Raleigh School Board rejected a request for integration by the Raleigh Citizens Association.

The Board on Tuesday voted unanimously to continue to operate the schools under the State Pupil Assignment Act. No action was taken in response to a petition filed by the Citizens Association 4th March.

The petition asked that the board adopt a plan for systematic desegregation of the schools beginning with the 1962-63 school term.

At the Durham board meeting Tuesday night, a new pupil assignment map was introduced which will replace the dual map system (one for reassignment of white students and one for Negro students) previously used.

The new assignment map was ordered by federal Judge Edwin M. Stanley in recent integration cases here to replace the old system.

The old system resulted in Negro students being placed in the same schools as white students.

Durham Schools Integrate Raleigh Body Remains Firm

While Raleigh school officials can't seem to decide whether to integrate the city's schools, other major North Carolina cities are forging ahead with school integration as this week, the Durham City Board of Education took measures which will integrate all of the city's elementary schools this fall.

Shaw Freshman Says He Will Enter Wake Forest

Edward Reynolds, freshman student at Shaw University, announced this week that he definitely would make an application for admission to the undergraduate school at Wake Forest College.

Reynolds' statement came just after the board of trustees at Wake Forest announced that racial bars had been lowered in the college's undergraduate school.

Trustees voted 17 to 9 to approve a recommendation of their race relations committee to admit Negroes to the college for the first time in the school's 128-year history.

Last week's action completed a chain of events started in the spring of 1960 by a group of Wake Forest students and faculty members headed by J. Glen Blackburn, Jr. At that time Blackburn and other students began planning to bring an African student to Wake Forest.

In April, 1961, the trustees voted to admit Negroes to the college's graduate school of law and medical school. (None has entered to date.)

In June 1961, the trustees extended admission privileges to Negroes for summer school and night classes. Three Negroes attended the college's summer school and several are enrolled in evening classes.

In an interview with Reynolds this week, the native Ghanaian who was denied admission to Wake Forest last year, said he feels fairly certain that his application will be accepted this year.

An "A" student at Shaw, Reynolds, 20, said he anticipates no difficulty with school work at Wake Forest. He said he intends to major in Religion.

Of his year at Shaw, he said, "I like Shaw very much, but I think Wake Forest might present more of a challenge."
