Livingstone Seniors Hear Bishop Smith At Finals

SALISBURY — The 80th commencement of Livingstone College got into full swing Sunday when Bishop William M. Smith, Mobile, Ala., and prelate of the 16th district, told the graduating classes that they should avoid the evils of mental blindness, as he delivered the sermon at 2:30 p. m.

He admonished them to not become obsessed with the kind of blindness that would make them lose the vision to serve their fellowmen. He cited discipline as very necessary lest they become self-indulgent and not be able to take the right course in life.

He described unassured companionship as one of the deterrents to a full life of service. He warned that this type of companionship could lead to disaster. He was mindful of the fact that an over-proud person was one more anxious to act in society than to serve society. He told the audience that too many people get tired of being good and therefore lose their ability to constrain others to be good.

He pictured flattery as one of the most salient enemies of service to mankind. "Too many people grow careless when they think they have achieved and are told by other people that they have arrived. Flattery has doomed more people to destruction than any thing else," said the prelate.

His final admonition was to not grow careless. "There is no bargain in sin. It is far better to be honest than popular. You cannot afford to rule God out of your life. You cannot rest on material things and live" he said in closing.

In 1968, only two per cent of Cuba's farm sales went to the Soviet Bloc and almost none of its agricultural imports came from there. In 1961, the bloc received about 70 per cent of Cuba's farm exports and supplied about two-thirds of its agricultural purchases.

A&T Students Told Of Challenges Of Life

GREENSBORO — Graduating seniors at A&T College were told last week about the challenges of life.

The speaker was Rev. James C. Kelly, personnel dean, West Virginia State College, Institute West Virginia. A former pastor at several churches in the East and who has held personnel posts at two other colleges, Rev. Kelly was delivering the sermon at the baccalaureate services, the opening program of the 71st annual commencement. The program was held in the Charles Moore Gymnasium on Sunday morning, May 27.

Taking his text from James 4:14, "Ye know not what shall be on the morrow," he spoke from the subject, "The Challenges of Tomorrow."

"Life," he said, "is filled with paradoxes and shot through with dilemmas, and man with all of his knowledge is not capable of eliminating them."

He told the audience that because of an awareness of uncertainties of life, there is extreme necessity for responsible planning and action in the face of these uncertainties.

To meet these challenges and to reduce the day to day anxiety caused by life's uncertainties, he told the audience that one must have been perspective, "an unusual obstinate attempt to see life clearly and consistently" . . . to get the right slant on life.

He said the challenges of tomorrow require tremendous stamina, the toughest kind many of have ever known, because new situations ahead indicate demands for excellence, continued growth and development, increased specialization, adaptability and readiness to make vocational adjustment, equal opportunity, to be a part of man's solution, rather than his problem.

MOBILE, Ala. — Levenson Jennings was bound over to a grand jury here on a charge of driving a stolen car.

Jennings was arrested when he stopped a car and asked occupants to give his stalled vehicle a push. It so happens that the car he stopped was a police car. The officers responded—but act to the man's request.
