Office Is Vacated By Local Lawyer

By CHARLES R. JONES
"I have nothing to add to what has already been said, and I see no point in an interview," are the words which Raleigh Attorney Eugene A. Solomon allegedly used to inform a CAROLINIAN representative Tuesday afternoon that he had no intention of discussing further reports that "pressure" from militant Negro groups prevented him from getting a $5,200-a-year position as a State Probation Officer.

The matter was brought to light last Wednesday when State Probation Director Charles Cohoon denied reports that his commission had rejected Solomon, reportedly because Negro groups felt that his views on racial matters were "moderate." The attorney resides at 731 S. East Street.

Cohoon said the reason for Solomon's rejection was because the class for officers at the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill were overcrowded. "I had to cut one and Solomon was the last hired and the first to be let go," he stated.

Assistant Probation Director C. W. Thompson, told this reporter Wednesday that no contract had been issued to Solomon. He further stated that no contracts are given at all until the trainees have completed the courses at Chapel Hill and have been sworn in by a judge and hired for work in a particular area.

Cohoon, in an interview with newsmen last Wednesday, allegedly admitted hiring Solomon "in a sense." He said further that he was over-anxious to get officers in the field and hired more than could be trained at the time.

Raleigh's 'Marchers' Report On Experience

Editor's Note: Interviews were conducted by Charles R. Jones with the following Raleigh persons who were in attendance at the mammoth "March on Washington" last Wed., August 28. Following are their responses:

MRS. SARAH LYON SANDERS, 715 Method Road, housewife — "It was just perfect. I thought everything went along smoothly and the entire program was very well carried out. The people chosen were evidently those who could follow instructions. I feel that even if Congressmen were not impressed by the number of persons in attendance, they will think before acting in view of the oncoming elections, state and national."

MRS. ROSA CURTIS, Method, Registrar's office, St. Augustine's College — "I am glad that I could participate in the 'March on Washington for Freedom and Jobs.' It was a reminder of hope, sacrifice and of faith. Deep in my heart I do believe that we shall overcome some day."

BERNARD ROGERS, 525 Calloway Drive, Rochester, N.C., state employee — "It was a very orderly demonstration. There was a tremendous and electrifying air as Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., so graphically illustrated the ultimate objectives of the Negro race. I was very impressed with the entire procedure of the demonstration."

MISS BERYL SANSOM, 1506 Rock Quarry Road, rising freshman at Hampton Institute, Va. — "I'm sure it was very effective and a beautiful thing to behold. Just to witness that many Negroes and whites united for the same cause was miraculous."

MRS. E. Y. REID, 1111 Fayetteville Street, housewife — "I thought it was the most impressive demonstration that I have ever witnessed. Everyone seemed as brothers and sisters united for a common cause."

RALPH CAMPBELL, JR., 804 E. Edenton Street, rising senior at J. W. Ligon High School — "I thought it was a very great demonstration and will go down in history as such."

"Durham Is Not Target" McKissick

DURHAM — Attorney Frank B. McKissick of this city, who is also national chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality, issued a statement Tuesday night denying that this city had been designated for immediate demonstrations involving "new militancy." Four other cities in this state are, he warned.

Student integrationist John Lewis, was quoted last Thursday, Aug. 29, as saying Durham, Atlanta, Ga., and Nashville, Tenn., would be target cities for the new action.

A quick response was brought from this city's mayor, Wense Grabarek, who cited the voluntary integration advances made in Durham and urged that the plan be withdrawn.

"North Carolina has not been

Four Face Murder Raps In Carolina

At least four North Carolinians were charged with murders during the past week. The scenes of the crimes were in Elizabeth City, Clinton and Graham, and the defendants are two women and two men.

Miss Helen Chapman, 28, of Elizabeth City was charged early Saturday morning with murder in the death of James Howard Cartwright, also 28.

Police Chief Clarence Owens said Miss Chapman was arrested shortly after Cartwright was stabbed in the heart with a small kitchen knife. The victim died enroute to the Alhambra Hospital.

Asker Brothers, 45, told police the stabbing occurred following an argument between the two at his home. Cartwright is alleged to

Salisbury Host To Klan Meet

SALISBURY—Hooded and robed followers of the fiery cross, symbol of the Ku Klux Klan, held a meeting here Saturday night and heard the Imperial Wizard of the United KKK of America, Robert M. Shelton, speak.

Ed Barnhardt's farm, located about four miles east of Salisbury, was the scene of the meeting, following an afternoon motorcade through this city of about 13 cars, carrying approximately 40 Klansmen, each dressed in full regalia.

A native of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, Shelton was the main speaker in the first KKK rally in over four years in Rowan County.

He reported that the rally was part of a "massive membership drive to counteract the Negro civil rights movement."

The Wizard refused to disclose the number of members in his organization.

James E. Jones, a spokesman for the Rowan Lodge No. 1 of the United Knights of the Ku Klux Klan the sponsoring group, said: "We feel we have the same right as Negroes to demonstrate. . . the Catholics have their Knights of Columbus, the Jews have their B'nai B'rith, the Negroes have the NAACP and we have the Ku Klux Klan."

Plans made at the meeting were not disclosed to the press.

ACCRA, GHANA (ANP) — A solemn formal state funeral was given brilliant American scholar Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, who died here earlier in the week at the age of 95.

Dr. DuBois was given a state funeral at Christiansburg Castle here, now known as Government House. He was buried just outside the Castle.

President Kwame Nkrumah, his cabinet members of parliament, and state officials joined in the ceremony. A national state of mourning was declared since Dr. DuBois had renounced his American citizenship and become a citizen of Ghana.

Dr. William Edward Burghardt DuBois was founder of the Pan-African Congresses and one of the incorporators of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

DuBois, a longtime advocate of civil rights for Negroes in the United States, was author of many works about Negroes. He was editor-in-chief of the Encyclopedia of the Negro, 1933-48, and at the time of his death was working on an Encyclopedia Africana.

A former American citizen, Dr. DuBois was born in Great Barrington, Mass., Feb. 23, 1868, just five years after the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation by Abraham Lincoln. He had lived in Ghana the last few years and recently became a citizen of Ghana.

Dr. DuBois' death was announced "with deep regret" in a government statement. Meanwhile, Ghanaian pickets demonstrated in front of the U. S. Embassy here in sympathy of the Washington march for civil rights.

den Kwame Nkrumah, then a student.

DuBois engaged in a long standing and sometime bitter feud with another famous Negro, Booker T. Washington. DuBois was an advocate of classical education and disagreed with Washington's theory that Negroes could elevate themselves by their own bootstraps through trade training.

He was a member of the Ameri-

Different Reason In Each Case

BY ALEXANDER BARNES

The parting words to the more than half million persons who took part in the "March on Washington" seemed to have struck a chord here in North Carolina and students in Monroe and Wilmington reacted "to a certain degree" when they refused to attend classes at so-called Negro schools in their respective towns Tuesday. This reporter was in attendance at the Washington demonstration.

Students in the widely separated towns notably did not go to classes but proceeded to demonstrate. According to reliable sources less than half of the expected 856 showed up at Winchester School, Monroe. It was further reported that a protest march was formed and proceeded past two white HAMLET — A 39-year-old man, who was found unconscious in his jail cell about 8 a. m. Monday died shortly thereafter while enroute to the North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

Two cellmates of Benny Hagan, the victim, reported that he beat his head against the cell during the night and allegedly knocked himself unconscious.

Hamlet Police Chief Earnest King said Hagan suffered bruising about his head.

He was arrested about 9 a. m. Monday on a public drunkenness charge and died, reportedly by his own hand, less MARRIES WHITE SOUTHERNER — Miss Charlayne Hunter is shown in January of 1961 while studying at the University of Georgia as she became the first Negro woman ever admitted to the university. She revealed Tuesday that she and Walter Stovall, a 25-year-old native of Douglas, Ga., were married in the spring, while both were journalism students at the Athens, Ga. university. When Stovall's father was informed of the marriage, he was quoted as saying: "The world has come to an end." (UPI PHOTO).

Miss Charlayne Hunter, White Southerner Wed

NEW YORK — Miss Charlayne Hunter, the first Negro female admitted to the University of Georgia, Athens, who graduated in May, revealed Tuesday that she had married the son of a textile mill executive from Douglas, Ga. Miss Hunter and Walter Stovall revealed ed the marriage and the fact that she is expecting a child in December.

"END OF THE WORLD" The bridegroom's father was quoted by his son as saying, "This is the end of the world," when he was informed of the marriage.

University of Georgia officials are now probing the law books in order to find an infraction for which to charge the mixed pair with fornication as it against Georgia law for a white person to marry anyone except another white person in the state of Georgia.

Stovall said he met Miss Hunter at a coffee shop on the campus. "The only seat available was one next to Charlayne," he said "We fell in love then."

The marriage took place in an undisclosed northern location early in the spring, but was not made public until this week.

Miss Hunter's mother, Mrs. Althea Hunter, of Atlanta, confirmed her daughter's marriage, but refused to elaborate further.

Stovall, who has a year to go to finish college, indicated late Tuesday that he will complete his education in the north.

Reflections On 'March' Aired Here

The Davis Street United Presbyterian Church, here was the scene last Sunday afternoon of a program entitled "One Hour of Reflections on the Washington March."

Five minute reflections were given by Dr. Grady D. Davis, president, Raleigh Citizens Association; Ralph Campbell, Sr., president, local NAACP chapter; and John Williams, Sr., chairman, Raleigh chapter, Congress of Racial Equality.

Dr. Davis said the march presaged an awakening of the conscience and consciousness for many people of the world to this world movement. He stressed five points which he felt were manifested by the mammoth gathering: unity, discipline, dignity, direction and awakening.

Campbell declared he was not as optimistic as the Rev. Dr. Davis. "I think the local rather than the national leaders were responsible
