CHAPEL HILL—"Luck aplenty all year long if you treat your knife and fork with some blackeye peas and pork."

Blackeye peas and hog jowls are traditional New Year's fare in North Carolina. As the folk rhyme suggests, a feast of blackeye peas on New Year's Day will bring "luck aplenty all year long."

The North Carolina Heart Association won't argue with the blackeye pea custom, especially since the custom apparently originated in North Carolina, according to a Library of Congress study on the matter a few years ago.

But the state heart group thinks New Year's Day might be a good time for Tar Heels to make the following six-point resolution to "be heart-smart."

1. I will ask my doctor (instead of worrying needlessly about "symptoms").

2. I will control my weight (to look better, feel better, work better, and live longer with normal weight).

3. I will get enough rest (to relieve constant fatigue).

4. I will keep physically fit (by enough and not too much exercise).

5. I will ease up-and relax.

6. I will help fight heart disease by supporting the Heart Fund in my county.

As for eating blackeye peas on New Year's Day, the North Carolina Heart Association says, that depends on whether your doctor's put you on a diet or not.

Raleigh Day Nursey Holds
Its 14th Christmas Program

Doting parents and friends were present in large numbers to witness the fourteenth Annual Christmas Program of the Raleigh Nursery School on Friday December 20, 1964.

Familiar patriotic, religious and Christmas songs were offered by the little one with new interpretation. Such numbers as "Silent Night," "Away in a Manger," "What Can I Give Him," "Hickory, Dickory Dock," "Merry Christmas," "The Lord's Prayer," and the opening song "America the Beautiful," took on new significance as they were sung perhaps for the first time by some of the little ones.

The Playlet, "Santa's Toys" portrayed the true spirit of giving as each child brought a toy to Santa for him to give to a good little boy or girl. The role of Santa Claus was played by five year old Marshall Butler. The reading "A Christmas Carol" was given by Gary Harris, Michael Smith and Deborah Hill.
