

Police Rescue Pastor From Angry Members

Rocky Mt. Minister Unharmed

BY J. B. WARREN
ROCKY MOUNT — The long-smoldering fire of discontent in the Mt. Zion First Baptist Church, Rev. George W. Dudley, minister reportedly, came near to the point of eruption during a conference meeting which ended in an abbreviated session after a visit by two white policemen who, allegedly, had been summoned by a colored ed-duty officer who is a member and officer of the church congregation.

In the absence of contact with the Rev. Dudley, whose telephone was not answered—after repeated calls—Sunday afternoon, this writer learned that the officers did visit the church upon call; that no arrests were made, but that counsel was held with some members who had been church officers prior to the period of disunity in the church.

Crawford "Snatched" From Death 34 Minutes Before Execution Here

BY CHARLES R. JONES
 Marjion Frank Crawford, 26, literally owes his life to Floyd Bixler McKissick.
 This writer was sitting in Warden K. B. Bailey's office last Friday morning when a call came through at 9:26 cancelling Crawford's scheduled execution in the State's gas chamber—just a scant 34 minutes before the Spartanburg, S. C. native was to die for rape and murder. He was found guilty of the rape-murder of 8-year-old Sandra Denise Marshall in a Winston-Salem cemetery Dec. 13, 1962.
 McKissick, a Durham attorney and national chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality, was contacted while in High Point last Thursday. He received a telephone call from Washington, and immediately started proceedings to take Crawford's case into federal courts after all other means had failed.

 Hosea Price Crawford's court-appointed attorney, had withdrawn from the case and Governor Terry Sanford refused to intervene, leaving McKissick "holding the bag."
 The condemned man said, "Thank the Lord" when Warden

Bailey informed him of the delay in execution.
 McKissick was at the door of Federal Judge Adegernon Butler's courtroom when it opened at 8 a.m. on last Friday morning. Judge Butler accepted McKissick's habeas corpus plea for Crawford.
 The office of Governor Sanford was immediately notified and the Director of Prisons, George Randall, was called. He, in turn, called Warden Bailey, who officially stopped the execution.

Interest In School Expressed

BY ALEXANDER BARNES & CHARLES R. JONES

In keeping with the interest expressed in the Shaw University drive last week, the CAROLINIAN conducted a survey this week and found that there is much interest in the campaign to raise $1,000,000.00 immediately.

A conference with an official of the Mechanics & Farmers Bank revealed that the bank is ready to make loans to any person, group of persons, or organization now expressing a desire to aid Shaw. The official said this was being done so that the college might have the money now. Any person who wishes to aid the school can obtain the money and take as long as one year, or even longer to repay the loan.

Police Officers E. M. Meekins and J. L. Denton reported that Horton called headquarters after he found his wife and said he thought she was dead when he found her on the floor.

Another man, identified as Eddie Evans, 59, of Garner, came to the shack five minutes after the officers arrived. He reportedly had been a guest of the Hortons earlier in the evening.
 Coroner Bennett also said Mrs. Horton's liver was in "bad shape," but attributed death to the heart attack.

Lin Holloway, Scribe, Succumbs In Norfolk

BY ALEXANDER BARNES

DURHAM — Journalistic circles were shocked here Tuesday when the word came that Lin Burke Holloway, a hometown boy who started as a cub and rose to the heights in the newspaper world, had succumbed to an extended illness in Norfolk, Va.

LIN BURKE HOLLOWAY

Lin as he was known to his readers and fellows, got his beginning on the CAROLINA TIMES here and then continued his adopted style of reporting on persons, events and things with the NEW YORK AGE, and the CAROLINIAN in Raleigh. He later joined the staff of the NORFOLK JOURNAL & GUIDE. His poignant pen, with satirical reflections, invaded night life to the extent that he was loved by many and feared by some.
 His penchant for news took him from church to the underworld, and when he answered the call of "26" Tuesday of this week, journalism lost a pungent writer who asked no favors and gave no quarters in the performance of his duties and obligations to the profession.

Funeral services are scheduled to be held in Norfolk on Thursday. His body will be brought here and buried in Beechwood Cemetery, Saturday, 2 p.m. He was born in Durham and received his education in the local schools. He was the
