NORTH CAROLINA
WAKE COUNTY
IN THE SUPERIOR COURT
NOTICE OF SERVICE BY PUBLICATION
ANNE PERRY ALLEN, Plaintiff
vs.
ROBERT BURNS ALLEN, Defendant.
ANNE PERRY ALLEN, Plaintiff,
vs.
ROBERT BURNS ALLEN,
DEFENDANT.

Take notice that a pleading or Complaint seeking relief against you has been filed in the above entitled action and was filed in the Superior Court of Wake County on the 4th day of March, 1964.
The nature of the relief being sought is as follows:
Plaintiff seeks a divorce absolute from Robert Burns Allen, defendant, upon the grounds that plaintiff and defendant have lived separate and apart for more than two continuous years next preceding the institution of this action and that plaintiff and defendant are still living in the said state of separation.
You are required to answer or demur to the said Complaint of plaintiff not later than the 2nd day of May,

YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE

You are escorted into the beautifully furnished private office of Stephen McLean, one of the city's foremost attorneys. There you are met by his junior partner, Robert Adams, and the beautiful young red-haired secretary, Catherine Thomas—both of them very distressed and worried looking. Then your eyes travel to the body of the 65-year-old Stephen McLean, sprawled on the thick carpeting between his desk and one of the windows. There is a huge, ugly-looking bruise over his left temple.

"It all happened so suddenly," exclaims Catherine Thomas, "and I don't know when I'll recover from the shock of it! He fell and struck his head on the edge of that table under the window. Maybe if his heart hadn't been so weak..."

"Suppose you tell me the entire story from the beginning," you suggest to Adams.

"Well, Mr. McLean was seated at his desk dictating some notes to Cathy when I entered his office here. I had some rather important questions to ask him regarding a new case we took on this week. But before I could get started with him, he seemed to turn pale, and a peculiar expression came over his face. He was in rather poor health... had suffered a couple of heart attacks during the past two years... and maybe he felt something of the sort coming on again. Anyway, he suddenly jumped up from his chair and started across the office towards that table under the window, muttering something about pills. There's the box of pills on the table," he adds, nodding his head in that direction. "Anyway... I don't know what caused it... but he stumbled and fell heavily, striking his head a sickening blow on the edge of the table."

You saunter over behind McLean's desk, giving a superficial glance at the papers scattered over it. Then you pull out the chair in order to seat yourself at the desk, and pulling out the wide center drawer, you note that the contents are very neatly—almost fastidiously—arranged... orderly rows of pens, a ruler, a paper knife, a few paper clips, and some postage stamps of various denominations.

"How long have you been employed here?" you ask Catherine Thomas.

"Oh, I'm quite new here... only about two weeks. I've been working for both Mr. McLean and Bob here... but now..." and she breaks into tears.

"Has either of you touched or moved anything at all in this office?" you ask.

"Nothing at all," replies Robert Adams. "We knew right away that there was nothing we could do at all for Mr. McLean. And, in fact, we didn't even use his phone to call you. We hurried to the outer office and used Cathy's phone, and then we waited out there."

"Why didn't you call a doctor?"

"Oh... we knew he was dead, and that there was nothing that could be done to help him. Maybe we should have," Adams shakes his head mournfully. "I guess I wasn't thinking too clearly."

"I'm inclined to agree with you," you say. "You didn't think this out too clearly. This does not have the appearance of an accidental death, and I'll have to take both of you to headquarters with me for further questioning!" Why?

SOLUTION
You were compelled to pull McLean's chair away from the desk in order to seat yourself. Yet, according to Adams' story, McLean had jumped up suddenly from his desk—and if this had been so his chair would surely have been pushed back away from the desk. The first-name basis between "Cathy" and "Bob" makes you suspicious, too.

1964, and upon your failure to do so the plaintiff seeking service against you will apply to the Court for the relief sought.
This the 20th day of March, 1964.
SARA ALLEN,
Assistant Clerk of Superior Court,
March 14, 21, 28; April 4, 1964.

TONGUE

Sometimes, in cases of extreme illness, the victim's condition has to slightly improve before he realizes how sick he is, and how much sicker he must have been! Racially speaking, Raleigh, North Carolina is such a being!
Yes, several shops have integrated their sales personnel, some "white" restaurants and hotels serve Negro patrons. And there are various areas in which the darker complexioned has brought the brighter complexion. Nevertheless, in Raleigh, North Carolina is still on the critical list.
A Negro bus driver is not good enough to accommodate Caucasian passengers, but white drivers are eligible to range through all-Negro sections—some of them displaying very rude chauffeur-manners! Negro policemen are not allowed to arrest a white man, but a gutless, spineless, white tailor is upheld for breaking the arm of a Negro woman! Yes, this patient is in a terrible fix, and in serious need of a big dose of bad-tasting, good medicine.
The whole thing should be boycotted.

BATTY OVER BATTING BATS

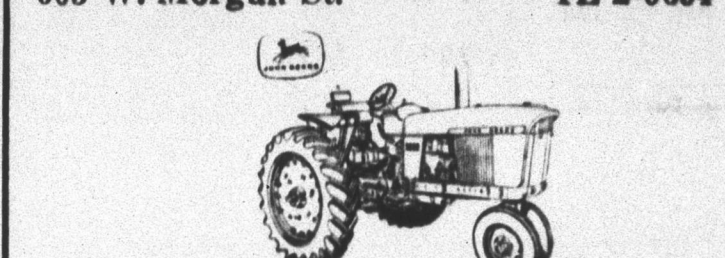

HOUSTON (ANP)—John Nelson, an engineer in the Bettis building, is convinced he's going batty with his nightly conflict with scores of bats that have been roosting the building for weeks. By now, he's something of a marksman with a broom, but the more he kills, the more he has to kill. The bats evidently come to the building from some old buildings nearby which have been demolished. They flock into the basement of Bettis building in droves, scrambling about in the pipes, the ceiling and clogging up the smokestack. One night, he hit the jackpot by snuffing out 100 bats.
