NCC Law Student Seeks Representative's Seat

DURHAM—Henry M. Michaux, Jr., a senior at the North Carolina College School of Law, has announced his candidacy for a seat in the State House of Representatives subject to the Democratic primary May 30.

HENRY M. MICHAUX, JR.

He is believed to be the first Negro to seek the Democratic nomination for a representative's spot in the Legislature in the history of Durham county. Michaux, 26, is a 1962 graduate of North Carolina College and is vice-president and secretary of the Union Insurance and Realty Co., of Durham.

A veteran of the Korean conflict, he did graduate work in physiology and biochemistry at Rutgers University after being separated from the Army in 1954. He will be running for one of Durham county's two seats in the State House.

active interest in Durham's future," he continued. "I think there is a definite need for us and I hope to be able to fill part of that need in the General Assembly."

DEAR SALLY

BY SALLY SHAW

DEAR SALLY: I'm a fellow of 22 with "mother trouble." She takes entirely too much interest in the girls I date on my own. The last girl I dated several times was a real doll, but when I brought her home to meet my folks my mother during the course of the evening told the girl her hairstyle was all wrong for her... and that did it so far as that girl was concerned! Another time she phoned a girl I had been out with the preceding night and bawled her out for keeping me out so late. You can probably judge from this that my mother is making a big effort to govern my life for me. So what can I do about it? BIG BOY.

DEAR BIG BOY: You need a good heart-to-heart talk with Mom. Tell her you love her and appreciate her interest, but that you're old enough to live your own life and to pick your own girls, without any interference from her. Tell her that, unless she goes along with this, you'll not give her the names of any girls you date in the future, nor will you ever bring any of them home to meet her.

DEAR SALLY: I'm a girl of 15, and am faced with a big problem. My best girl friend tells her mother she's at my house on certain nights when she's dating a boy, and she wants me to back this up in case her mother should phone our house or in case I should ever meet her mother later. Do you think my friendship with this girl obligates me to go along with this? H. J. L.

DEAR H. J. L.: Real friendship never involves deceit. Tell your friend that you can't help her lying to her mother, but that you can't lie for her.

DEAR SALLY: I'm a widow of 46 and have been going for the past three years with a bachelor of 47. He is very well-fixed financially, and makes his home with his equally wealthy widowed sister of 55. He is a very fine and thoughtful man, and we've had some wonderful times together. He tells me he's in love with me, and I'm sure I love him, too. But when the subject of marriage comes up, he tells me that his sister would have to live with us... that he could not let her live alone, because he promised his mother years ago that he would always look after her. I can't agree to this, because his sister is a very unpleasant person and I'm sure we could not live together in perfect harmony. He says I'm being unreasonable, and that if I can't agree to his proposition, then there can be no marriage. What do you think about this? D. E. W.

DEAR D. E. W.: If there is anyone who is being "unreasonable," it's this bachelor. He has lived to age 47 without marriage, and if he really wanted it now, he could still "look after" that sister of his. I think you should write him off, and find some new friends.

DEAR SALLY: My parents think that love is something to be ashamed of and hidden from public view. My finance and I are very much in love, but everytime we happen to sit too close together in my home or in his car, or if we hold hands, or if he happens to put his arm around my shoulders, my parents have fits. As for kissing each other in greeting or saying goodbye, you'd think that was downright immoral! What have you to say about this? F. G.

DEAR F. G.: Since your parents think as they do, it would be better if you were a little less demonstrative of your love in front of them. In fact, well-bred persons do not make public exhibit of their affection anywhere. Certainly, you do not have to "prove" your love to anyone else. This is something only for you and your finance.

Authority On Folklore To Bennett

GREENSBORO — Dr. J. Mason Brewer of Salisbury, an outstanding folklorist, will deliver the principal address when members of the humanities division at Bennett College, present their annual cultural project, April 9-10.

Dr. Brewer, professor of English at Livingstone College, will speak Friday at 10 a.m. in Pfeiffer Chapel on "Negro Folklore and Allied Forms," after which he will meet informally with student and the Science Assembly for continued discussion.

A native of Texas, Dr. Brewer received his education at Wiley College and at the University of Indiana from which he earned the master's degree of Doctor of Literature was conferred upon him by Paul Quinn College. Before coming to Livingstone, Dr. Brewer taught at Clifton College, Orangeburg, S. C., and Huston-Tillotson College in Austin, Texas.

J. C. Smith U. Receives 75 G's In Duke Endowment

CHARLOTTE—Johnson C. Smith University received a grant of $75,000.00 from the Duke Endowment Fund, according to an announcement made last week by Dr. Rufus P. Perry, President of the University.

Dr. Perry stated that this grant will be used for the purchase of additional books for the library and for strengthening the faculty.

Two of his best-known books are "The Word on the Brazos" and "Dog Ghosts," both published by the University of Texas Press. He is the only Negro ever to serve on the Council of the American Folklore Society or on its research committee and his work has appeared in numerous anthologies.

On Thursday at 8 p.m. in the David D. Jones Student Union foyer, there will be a program by division students of folk music, folk readings and folk dancing. Mrs. Lois Kinney, English instructor at A&T College, will be guest artist and will give a number of readings. Edward Lowe, chairman of the observance, will preside.

He further stated that the acquisition of volumes for the library has been stepped up to a rapid pace.

"We cannot wait on the construction of a new library. We are seeking new storage space on the campus now for volumes which are out dated in order to make room for more useful volumes in the present educational program."

Previous grants from the Duke Endowment have enabled the University to provide microfilm equipment for the library and to install an IBM Electronic Computer which will be used in improved instruction in mathematics and sciences.
