

Duncan Stresses Six Vital Points At Shaw

John B. Duncan, commissioner of the State Board of Education, Washington, D. C., addressed Shaw University students, Friday, May 8, to be forever mindful of the need to push and to need the responsible leadership and the moderates in their respective communities.

"Needle them to take the final step to freedom today; and warn them of the extreme dangers of trying to wait until tomorrow. Tell them that it is no longer a matter of time running out, but that time has already run out."

Duncan, in his address developed the following points: 1. Spiritual development and honesty of approach to modern day problems are pre-requisites to real and effective leadership. 2. Since both job and economic opportunity are greater today, one must fully prepare himself with either adequate and specialized training or further education. 3. Improved intergroup relations will enhance the spirit of brotherhood, which should, in turn, create a better and a greater partnership with white Americans; 4. We should develop rapport and respect for all reputable groups working toward the common goal of full democracy. 5. We must work faster with, and closer to the liberals and the moderates, even to the extent of "needling" them; and 6. There is no substitute for wisdom in all our efforts to gain full democracy.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. A. T. Spaulding of Durham.

TO ATLANTA UNIVERSITY—Enoch Henderson, a senior at Saint Augustine's College, has received a fellowship which will enable him to pursue graduate study in the field of social work at Atlanta University for the school year 1964-65. A sociology major and an honor student, Mr. Henderson is a native of Badin. He is also active in the social and political life of the local college.

Executive Committee Of Southeastern Business College Meets Saturday

DURHAM—The Executive Committee of the Southeastern Business College Alumni Association is now completing its final plans for its Saturday, May 16, meeting.

According to Miss Marjorie Williams, president of the Alumni Association, the May 16, meeting is designed for learning. The session will get underway Saturday morning at 9:00 o'clock with a coffee hour and machine demonstration, featuring machines from IBM, Victor, National Cash Register Company and Monroe Calculating Company.

Beginning at 10:00 a.m. several clinics will be conducted by business and professional people from North Carolina College, North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company and the State Employment Security Commission.

On Saturday afternoon, the Alumni, members of the Board of Trustees, and clinic consultants will have lunch at Schrafft's County Inn. At this time, President D. W. Smith will present to the Alumni Dr. S. B. Fulbright, Chairman of the College's Board of Trustees; and the other members of the Board.

The morning clinics will be conducted by Dr. Marion Thorpe, North Carolina College, who will discuss "The Psychological Dimensions of Personality in Business"; Raymond Newman, Employment Security Commission, "Procedures Used to Classify and Refer Job Applicants"; Mrs. Stella Cleland, North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, "Qualifications Necessary for Hiring and Promotional Purposes"; Mrs. Marian Thorne, North Carolina College, "Techniques and Shortcuts in Typewriting and Shorthand"; and Mrs. Emogene Ford, North Carolina College, "Proper Grooming for Business Occasions."

Miss Williams stated that in addition to Southeastern Business College Alumni, all secretaries, clerical personnel and other interested persons in the area are invited to participate in the Saturday morning clinic. Interested persons should contact Southeastern Business College for more details.

At Ligon School:

Wilder Memorial Trophy To Be Presented May 20

A fifty-inch tall trophy will be presented at the J. W. Ligon Jr.-Sr. High School to the senior having an overall "B" average and the highest average in sociology as a memorial to Thomas O'Dell Wilder.

Ligon Home Ec. Students Take A Trip

BY PATRICIA SANDERS

On Friday, May 8, 1964, Mrs. A. M. Livingston's third year Home Economics class, who are now studying a unit in housing, made a field trip to a nearby home that has recently been constructed on Coleman St. A very interesting tour of the house was conducted by Mr. Brown of the J. W. Winters Real Estate Company. The class carefully surveyed the house and took notes as Mr. Brown gave valuable information about the house, the lot and the closing cost. He told us the materials used in building the house, the size of the lot and all of the items which come under the closing cost. The information gained from this field trip will greatly benefit students planning to buy a home in the future.

Wilder, a Shaw University freshman, who was killed earlier in the year, was a sociology major at Shaw.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Delmar Wilder of the city and a graduate of the J. W. Ligon High School, class of '63. He attended the Washington Jr. High School and was a member of the Manley Street Christian Church.

The trophy will be presented on May 20, at the annual Awards Day at Ligon. It was donated by former classmates, Shaw University instructors, Raleigh businessmen, and friends under the coordination and efforts of Joseph Guess, a Shaw University student and former classmate.

DEAR SALLY

BY SALLY SHAW

DEAR SALLY: I'm a middle-aged man and have been playing poker with a certain group of former buddies once a month for almost 20 years. Recently my work took me out of town two consecutive months at the time when my poker club met, and another friend of mine filled in for me on these two nights. Now this friend has shocked me with the news that one of my buddies persistently cheats. Although I play for small stakes, now that I am in possession of this information, I cannot remember when this particular buddy has ever lost at any of our sessions—most of the time he's the big winner of anywhere from $10 to $15. This is really a bad situation, and I don't know what to do about it. Should I tell some of the other fellows, should I confront him with what I have learned or should I just say nothing? I hate the idea of my other friends being cheated out of their money just as much as I hate losing my own money this way. J. O. M.

DEAR J. O. M.: It would be best if you said nothing until you've managed to give him special attention yourself during one of these poker sessions. Since you're already armed with the knowledge, it shouldn't be difficult for you to decide for yourself if he is really cheating. Then, if you find for sure that he is, take him aside in private and tell him outright what you have discovered and warn him that if he continues the practice you'll expose him to the others.

DEAR SALLY: I am going with a college boy, a freshman, who is wonderful in all the important ways and I think the world and all of him. The big trouble is my family. They are always making fun of him in front of me, and mimicking him, just because of his pronunciation of certain words. He and his family come from a rather poor section of the country, and he has the habit of saying "wid" instead of "with," and "dese" instead of "these," and "dem" instead of "them." Do you think perhaps I should speak to him about this or just live in the hope that some day soon he will overcome these speech faults? NAN.

DEAR NAN: A boy who is in college should normally have smoothed out these speech faults long before now. If you are really concerned about this and feel you know him well enough, hint to him gently a-ho! This. He should appreciate it.

DEAR SALLY: My fiance and I are waiting a terrific argument on where to spend our honeymoon after we're married this summer. He wants to spend it in some resort where there's lots of fishing, and I want to go where there's a more romantic atmosphere, not a "fishy" environment. What is your reaction to this? C.J.H.

DEAR C.J.H.: I don't think this is worth all that "terrible argument." Maybe your confidence needs bolstering up. Surely your wiles should be strong enough to compete successfully with any fish in the world! You can create your own "romance" in any environment.

DEAR SALLY: I am a divorced woman with two children, ages 19 and 13. I have received news that my former husband is dying of an incurable disease. Although our life together was very unhappy, still I do not hold any rancor toward him, and I want very much when he dies to attend the funeral services with our two children. However, since our divorce three years ago, his family has been very bitter towards me, exhibiting this in no uncertain manner whenever we have happened to meet in this or that place. Under these circumstances, do you think it still would be all right for me and the children to attend the funeral?

MRS. L. B. DEAR MRS. L. B.: I think you should go, because he is your children's father, and because in religious teaching, death should erase all bitter feelings. I do hope his family realizes this.
