At the Poinsettia street address the intruder cut a window screen from the top to the bottom and entered through an open window.

Police reported that the man was well known to both the woman and her daughter. He carried the small girl into another room and then out a butcher knife to the mother's throat. When the child saw the knife, she screamed. The man then allegedly placed the little girl on a blanket beside the bed, and warned her to be quiet or he would kill her and her mother, too. The mother alleges that she was ubsequently raped. The woman said that when she had an opportunity she hit the man on the side of the head with a statue, which broke. She then grabbed a knife, and the man dashed nude out of a rear door. The woman said she kept s butcher knife beside her bed at all times.

In the Poinsettia street residence. police officers found, beside the bed in the northeast bedroom, a pair of men's blue trousers, a pair of shorts and a belt, indicating that the suspect apparently carried extra clothing as he made his nocturnal round of crimes.

Following his arrest, police booked Smith for burglary and rape. Investigation is continuing in the German street attack.
