one of our patrolmen found Brent lying in front of his garage with a fractured skull. At first it was believed that he was beyond help, but a couple of hours after he had been taken to the hospital he came around and was able to give us a fairly coherent account of what had happened. According to his story, he had received a phone call from Doug Standish, owner of the Royal Casino. Standish had called about a debt of $500 that Brent owed him-money that Brent had lost gambling in the Casino-and he told Brent that he needed it right away. Brent told Standish that he happened to have that much in cash in his home and that he would bring it to the Casino immediately. Within 3 minutes after making this promise, Brent said he walked out of his house with the money in his pocket and just as he reached his garage, he was struck on the back of the head . . . and that's all he remembered."

"And that's all you've managed to dig up?" you ask Chief Hender-

"That's the sum total of it," replies Henderson, shaking his head musingly. "We've questioned all of Brent's neighbors, with no results. Now, who . . . outside of Brent and Doug Standish . . . could have known that Tom Brent was carrying all that money at that particular time?"
