Baptists May Send 50 Grads Abroad In '65

RICHMOND, Va. — The Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board expects to have 50 single college graduates in strategic missionary tasks overseas by September 1, 1965, according to Rev. Louis R. Cobbs, director of its new short-term program.

Named the Missionary Jet program, the project is part of the Board's plans for expansion calling for 5,000 missionaries. It is designed for college graduates who do not feel called to a missionary career but who have dedicated talents and vocations to Christ and are willing to serve overseas for two years.

Rev. Cobbs, an associate secretary in the personnel department of the Foreign Mission Board, says: "These trained young people will work in many of the 56 countries where Southern Baptist missionaries are now serving. There, under the direction and supervision of career missionaries, they will share their Christian faith and perform tasks to meet critical needs."

Single college graduates under age 27 who are active workers in Southern Baptist churches are eligible for consideration as missionary journeymen. Those selected will serve a two-year, nonrepeatable term after 10 weeks of intensive training. They will receive travel expenses, housing and meals, and a small salary.
