GOTO CHURCH SUNDAY

St. Augustine's College Records Busy Summer

The hustle and bustle of the last week in May did not indicate the close of the academic year as one traditionally expects—but the advent of an action-packed summer at Saint Augustine's.

More than 350 persons came to participate in various summer conferences and to attend summer school. Baby buggies and little toys of various ages were a familiar sight on campus as parents packed them up and brought them along from points as far as Washington State and Canada. It was this group, free from the burden of concentrated studies, that seemed to have enjoyed the summer most.

Doors of the College were opened to the Fifty-Fifth Annual School of Religious Education June 8-12, under the direction of Dr. Tolle L. Caution, Associate Secretary of the Home Department National Council Protestant Episcopal Church. Th Rev. Daisuke Kitagawa, Executive Secretary of Domestic Missions of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Bishop Bravid W. Harris, Retired Bishop Liberia, the Rev. James P. Morton, Associate Secretary for Urban Work Home Department, National Council, Mr.
Marvin Josephson, Director, American Church, and Assistant Director to the Home Department of the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and others were among the keynoters for the occasion. Dr. Prezell R. Robinson was Dean of the Conference.

The regular summer session and science institutes got underway

June 24. For six weeks these groups sought to complement their knowledge of science, mathematics, and general studies.

The campus will be the scene for a summer conference for elementary supervisors, sponsored by the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction, August 3-7. Mr.
Harold W. Webb and others from all over the state will unite their skill and knowledge to make the conference a multiplicity of invaluable sessions.

A conference on the "Effects of Ionizing Radiation on Living Systems" will be held on campus August 10-28. This conference, one of the 35 held in the United States this year, is jointly sponsored by the United States Atomic Energy Commission and the National Science Foundation.

Other activities included a President's Reception for all participants, a talent show, bus excursions, and several informal gatherings and dances. After August 28th, the staff will pause briefly to set the stage for 250 odd freshmen and new students who are expected to arrive on campus September 13, to begin their week of orientation.

The regular summer session was directed by Mr. I. E. Spraggins, and Dr. Joseph Jones is the director of the conference on the "Effects of Ionizing Radiation on Living Systems," and the Science Institute for Elementary Teachers. Dr. Jeffrey Gipson was the director of the Science Institute for High School Teachers and Dr. Prezell R. Robinson was the director of the Institute in Mathematics.

BURL ALLEN'S

Ink TONGUE

Trying to put oneself in another's place does not enable one to become another, but it often yields amusing results. Imagine a sentimental wonderer.

TO MY TO-BE
A Gypsy seeress by the street Depicts a perfect sketch of you: You're "very beautiful and sweet." But who, My Sweetheart, who?

A truthful tealeaf reader read That you were waiting for me there;

Of course, you are, just as she said—But where, My Darling, where?!

Today I would find the girl of my kind.
If I knew your address and name, But all that I know about you is so Descriptive of many a dame.

A crystal-gazer—in his scope, Beholds our happiness begin.
So mine is not a hopeless hope—But when, My Future, when?!

YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE

When you enter the tastefully furnished apartment of the wealthy young playwright David Edmonds, you immediately see his body sprawled on the floor under the huge single oak beam that runs across the room. There is a length of thin rope still loosely knotted around his neck, and the contorted face and protruding tongue bears mute testimony to his death by strangulation. After studying the strong, bare beam overhead for a minute, then the overturned chair lying next to the body, you turn to the young man who phoned you of the tragedy, the victim's younger brother, Donald.
"A ghastly thing," exclaims the slim, frail-looking young man. "I hadn't seen David for more than three years . . . had just arrived in town today, and came to his apartment here to see him and to congratulate him on his remarkable success in playwrighting. I knocked on the door of the apartment several times, and when there was no answer, I tried the knob on the door and it swung open . . . and there was David hanging from that beam, that horrible expression on his face! I was so overcome that I couldn't move for a minute . . . then I climbed up on that chair he must have stood on in order to hang himself . . . and I untied the knot in the rope and let him down easily to the floor. It didn't take much of an examination to tell me that he was beyond any hope of resuscitation . . . so then I phoned you."

The young man brings out a cigarette, rolls it nervously in the thin, white fingers of one hand, then finally punches it quickly between his colorless lips, lights it with a flick of a silver lighter, and puffs spasmodically at it.

You gaze down at the sturdy, muscular looking body of David Edmonds, remembering his college day exploits on the football field as a battering, bruising fullback, and you can't help shaking your head sadly over this sudden and tragic ending to a meteoric career as a writer.

Finally you turn back to Donald and ask him sharply, "Are you sure you came here only for a brotherly visit?"

"Why sure . . . what do you mean?" he stutters.

"I think that your brother was very much alive when you arrived here, that motivated by hatred of him or possibly by envy of his success and prosperity, you came here to kill him. I think that somehow you got behind him, taking him by surprise, and with that rope wrapped around his neck you strangled him and then set up this phony suicide story!"

Why do you suspect Donald Edmonds of having killed his brother?
SOLUTION
man such as Donald Edmonds.

Usually a hanging victim is CUT down . . . this being much faster and easier on the body than strangling. And you say Donald Edmonds was a fullback on the football field. A fullback is a big, powerful man.

BUSY SUMMER AT ST. AUGUSTINE'S—Shown are scenes from the summer activities now being conducted at Saint Augustine's College here. In top picture, Miss Mary Lue Shaffer of New York, who participated in various institutes at the college, is shown giving remarks at a banquet for all participants. Second photo shows Miss Anna J. Cable giving a lecture in biology to par-
lectures to a class in the regular summer school. Shown at the bottom are participants in an Institute for Teachers of High School Mathematics as they combine skills in solving difficult equa-

Dr. Weatherford Chosen For Special NC School

DURHAM—Dr. Allen E. Weatherford, II, chairman of the North Carolina College Department of Physical Education and Recreation, and Dr. Carl S. Blyth, in charge of the Laboratory of Applied Physiology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, have been designated as persons to outline a program of physical education for the New Developmental School in Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

The school is sponsored by a grant which is also matched by funds from the State.

An experimental school, established for the purpose of assisting secondary-level underachievers (persons identified as having IQ's of 105-115 but not making satisfactory grades), the institution will enroll students from North Carolina and other Southern states.

Along with students, some 50 teachers of these underachievers will attend the school and will receive instruction and information about new techniques and materials from specialists who will be selected from throughout the nation.

The school, which will enroll 350 students and 50 teachers four times per year, is one of four of Gov.
Sanford's special projects designed to conserve and enhance the utilization of human and natural resources.

Every citizen of this country, be he a Goldwater, a Wallace, or a Johnson supporter, knows very well that none of our problems are being watched more closely by the rest of the world than the issue of individual freedom. And why not?

If America cannot guarantee individual freedom to every American citizen then why should she expect to maintain leadership in the free world?

She must find some way to practice what she preaches. She must continue to seek ways to bridge the ever-widening gap between democratic principles and democratic practices. Therefore every American citizen has a role to play in getting this job done. Each must be guaranteed that insalubrious rights.

Yes, We All Talk

BY MARCUS H. BOULWARE
ENGLISH SOUNDS Question: What is a sound in the English language called? A friend and I have argued on the question of whether or not we need the letter (C) in the English language. Please comment in your column.—B.M.A.
Answer: In the Websterian system, our speech sound units are called "letters of the alphabet"— some 26 in all. In IPA (International Phonetic Alphabet), a sound unit, or letter is called "phoneme." Each phoneme in the IPA system represents only one sound, while in the Websterian discursive system one letter may represent several sounds. The fact that one letter may represent several sounds is confusing in learning to spell and read.
Our Roman alphabet does not have enough symbols to represent all of English sounds (42 to 46), and therefore we use discursive marks to show the difference in sounds represented by the same letter.
