VISITORS FROM NEWPORT NEWS, VIRGINIA
Rev. and Mrs. S. W. Williams and one of their church mothers stopped by for a short time last week. They were attending the Retreat session of the A.M.E. Church at Durham. Their young son, Rev. S. W. Williams, Jr., will have his fine new church building dedicated by the bishop on August 30. We wish for him and his wife a great success in his pastoral and home work.

A THOUGHT
Remember that when the darkness gathers and no light you can see. Just remember that God has promised to light our path ways through deserts and deep seas. Just before the dawn the darkness seems more severe. But just hold on to God's hand. He is in the front and in the rear.

THE LATE, LATE SHOW

Even in August seeds still can be planted for late, late crops like radishes and lettuce which come up quickly and are usable within a few weeks from sowing. Try them and see.

Although it's August there are many vegetables that can be planted in the south and two that still can be sown in the north for late, late crops. These are, of course, the quick-growing, quick-producing lettuces and radishes.

Any kind of leaf lettuce and either red or white radishes will furnish food for the table during September if seeds are planted now. Just use a space in the garden where earlier crops stood and which now is vacant because you ate what you grew there.

It is important that you prepare the soil for growing these late crops in the same way you readied it last spring for early crops. Turn it over, rake it fine, and add fertilizer before planting, for that added last spring has doubtless been used by the vegetables already harvested.

Should the weather be dry, use the time-tested method of sprinkling water in the bottom of the drill before you sow the seeds. Then use a board or plank to cover this moistened row for a few days after planting, to help the soil retain moisture. The seeds will be up in short order.

As experienced gardeners know, radishes and lettuce are two of the easiest crops to grow. Keep the rows weeded and water if necessary. Before you know it you'll be eating these crisp vegetables.

Should frost threaten, cut coat hangers and form them into U's. Stick the ends into the soil like croquet wickets, spacing the U's 18" apart. Use discarded plastic bags from dry-cleaned garments to stretch over these U-frames and presto, you'll have a miniature greenhouse to protect those late crops until you eat them.

Picture Story . . .

TRICKS OF THE TRADE

A pronged cultivator is made to be pulled towards you, so that, if necessary, you walk backwards when you use it. This also keeps your feet from tramping the newly cultivated soil.

WALK FORWARD

If you walked backward when being, you would cover uncultivated soil with loose soil and not know where you'd head and where not. So follow the advice on these pictures, found on a garden poster last in a situation, this school garden.

STRONG ARM OF THE LAW—Elizabeth, N. J.: Club-swinging policemen disperse rioters, August 12th, as gangs roamed the streets in the dock area. Three Negro youths were arrested for throwing Molotov cocktails from an auto as epidemic violence flared up for the second night here. (UPI PHOTO).
