

GET RESEARCH GRANT — Dr. George C. Royal and Dr. Gladys W. Royal, both professors at A&T College, will conduct this year a scientific research project supported by the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission at a cost of $16,915. The title of the study is, "An Investigation of The Therapeutic Use of Bovine Bone Marrow Following Production of Radiation Injury To Mice."

PICKET LBJ RANCH FOR MISSISSIPPI — Young Negro and white students from the University of Texas are shown in Johnson City, Texas last week picketing on the roadway in front of President Lyndon B. Johnson's LBJ Ranch. A spokesman for the group said the demonstration was to draw attention to the situation in McComb, Miss. The President spent the weekend at his ranch and left the ranch to return to Washington while these pickets were still walking the roadway in front of his ranch. (UPI PHOTO).

DEAR SALLY

BY SALLY SHAW

DEAR SALLY: I'm a girl of 23, and in love with a man of 26. Everything would be fine with us if it weren't for his mother. She's a very domineering type of woman, has disliked me from the very start, and to tell you the truth I'm sure she would dislike ANY woman who threatened to "steal her little boy from her." She has succeeded three times in the past in breaking us up, and now shows signs of doing it again. He has in fact suggested that we date secretly—behind his mother's back, so to speak—because he wants to keep things harmonious in his home and doesn't want to "upset" his mother. Much as I think of this man, I'm still about ready to check out. What do you think about this? H.E.B.

DEAR H.E.B.: I think you should have "checked out" long before now. It's quite obvious that you have been going out with a man, but with a 26-year-old "little boy" who hasn't yet matured enough to get from under the dominating thumb of his mother.

DEAR SALLY: I've been a widow for eight years, am only 45 now, and I really miss the love and companionship of a good man. But I keep wondering if there is any "respectable" way that I can go about encouraging the attentions of any worthwhile man without appearing too eager or bold. There is, for example, one particular man whom I've known for several years. He's my age, a widower, very attractive, and has always been very friendly towards me—but, although I'm sure he's been on the verge of asking me to go out with him a number of times, he's never come out with it. I think this is due to shyness, and there any gentle way I could encourage him? T.E.E.

DEAR T.E.E.: Why don't you try inviting him to a dinner party or bridge party in your home with other friends? It's quite possible that through this one evening, you'll encourage more active attention from him.

DEAR SALLY: I'm a fellow of 24, and have been dating a beautiful girl for about six months. We have great times together, and I'm sure she thinks as much of me as I do of her. In fact, everything would be fine, except for one thing. Before she and I met, she went steady with another guy for almost a year, and it beats me how his name is always popping up. She's forever bringing his name into the conversation, such things as, "Tommy and I once went there," "Tommy was a good bowler," "Tommy never did go for that kind of music," and so on and so on. The really gets on my nerves. If I'm the only man in her life, as she claims, why does this other fellow's name have to keep looming up? HANK.

DEAR HANK: Naturally, after having gone with one fellow for a year, there WOULD be memories—but they are just memories, and it's a little silly to be jealous of such things. After all, as she has told you, you're the only man in her life NOW—so why fret so much about things past?

DEAR SALLY: My husband and I have just received a so-called note of thanks from a bride for a very lovely and expensive gift we sent her. Her note reads "Thank you very much for the lovely wedding gift. Sincerely yours..." And that's all. This leaves us with a very empty feeling. We weren't exactly expecting a lengthy manuscript from her, but we do feel she could have been a little more eloquent in expressing her appreciation for a gift we spent so much time and money in selecting for her. What do you think? M.M.

DEAR M.M.: I agree with you, her letter sounds very cold, much like a form letter she used indiscriminately for all senders of gifts. Any truly well-bred and appreciative bride will be much more sincere in writing her all-important thank-you notes. And most certainly she will mention the gift by her name, thus adding warmth and sincerity to her expression of thanks.

Lyndon B. Johnson, President
"Firmness in the right is indispensable today for peace. That firmness will always be measured. Its mission is peace."
MONEY may not bring happiness but it brings such a good imitation that it is often hard to tell it from the real thing.

Trent Advises KC Students To Develop Intellectual Self

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — In his address at Knoxville College's 90th Opening Convocation in Giffen Alumni Auditorium September 23, Dr. William J. Trent, Jr., assistant personnel director of Time, Inc. and former executive director of the United Negro College Fund, Inc., advised his capacity audience on the following five points:

1. To know the intellectual self;
2. To enter an unending quest for knowledge to grasp the meaning of literature, art and music with a proper balance of family, community, church and job relationships in the use of one's time;
3. To prepare self for proper perception and apprehension of life's beauties;
4. To read extensively in the area of one's interest and reflect often upon matter read to put things in their proper places and to take a look at self;
5. To go to the source to see for one's self when books will no longer suffice.

Dr. Trent's listeners included a record enrollment of 843 students, the faculty and staff, and alumni and friends of the College. KC President Dr. James A. Colston, who introduced the speaker, said, "Knoxville College approaches its 90th school year with a feeling of assurance that it is better prepared and equipped to serve its growing student body than at any time in recent years." He also introduced faculty and staff personnel.
