Fund Wins 17 Workers' Release

McCOMB, Miss. - NAACP Legal Defense Fund lawyers secured release this week of the last 17 Civil Rights workers and local Negroes remaining in jail following a wave of arrests here last month.

These arrests were carried out under a specially enacted Mississippi law which charged the Civil Rights advocates with "criminal syndicalism."

This was culmination of a brutal summer here during which ten Negro churches in the area were burned to the ground and sixteen bombings of Negro homes took place since May 28th.

NAACP Legal Defense Fund okesman said this is the first time in four years that bonds have been secured for civil rights workers in Mississippi. Each defendant posted a $500 bond in order to make the $5,000 bail requirement.

In another development, the Federal District Court here named a three-judge panel con-sisting of Judges Mise and Clayton and Fifth Circuit Justie John Minor Wisdom to hear the Defense Fund motion, filed September 25th, that the Court enjoin the presecutions. No hearing date has been set for consideration of the Defense Fund's charge that the "criminal syndicalism" law-passed by the state legis-lature this past spring - violates freedom of speech, is vague and indefinite, and is being used solely to harass and intimidate civil rights efforts. On September 29th, the Defense Fund filed a further petition in the Federal Court here, this one to remove the McComb cases from the Pike County Circuit Court, where, the Fund argues e, the Fund argued, a fair trail
