The Ninety-Ninth Founder's Day Services were observed at Shaw University on Friday, November 20, with state and national leaders participating.

At 10:15 a. m. the services began at the grave site of the founder, Dr. Henry Martin Tupper. Following the brief service, a floral wreath was placed at the marker by "Miss Shaw University," represented by Miss Shirley Moss, a junior of Bridgeport, Connecticut.

The formal Convocation was held in the Spaulding Gymnasium, where an overflow crowd heard Dr. John W. Davis, Director Teacher Information and Security Program NAACP Legal Defense Fund, Inc., New York City. Dr. Davis used as his subject to challenge his audience, "Shaw Looks to the Future." After paying tribute to the Founder, Dr. Henry Martin Tupper, he stated that "the histories written on American education have been all too quiet on the great contributions made to the progress and security of this nation by the founders of scores of colleges and universities for Negroes.

The founders of these educational institutions for Negroes have exerted a powerful moulding influence on American life, not for outward conformity, but for tolerance, independence, human dignity, freedom, respect, intellectual activity, inner contentment and the right to disagree.

Dr. Davis also stated that "while the nation, and particularly the south, was timid or unconcerned to initiate and push enthusiastically educational programs for Negroes, these noble and spiritually motivated men and women stepped into the breach to found and build schools to lift the intellectual horizons of Negro youth. By inspiring words and gallant examples, they planted in men and women concepts of liberty, civic responsibility, constructive national and international service, justice and truth.

"The limits of the influence of Shaw cannot be defined" he continued. "The founder envisioned the need for legal, medical, religious, arts and sciences, pharmaceutical, teacher and missionary training and established departments to serve these needs. Judging from current demands for workers in these fields in America today, one is inclined to feel that both Negroes and America lost much through elimination of some of these vital departments whatever the reason for such action.

Dr. Davis further stated that "good universities are expected to graduate good students—past successes and techniques are insufficient today. Old university programs and methodology must yield one way or the other to new demands."
