"John Smith" writes to the Raleigh News and Observer. and after citing the fact that girls have been admitted to uil the privileges of the University and the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Raleigh, demands to know les pertaining thereto. Mr. Smith's point appears well taken. The Landmark's sym pathy is with the girls but if the poor, down-trodden sisters are to be admitted to the male colleges on all fours with their brothers we are un able at the present to see why the brothers should not be admitted to all the privileges of the female institutions .-Statesville Landmark.

Dr. T. A. Crawford, of Rock Hill, told a News reporter of a singular incident that occurred in Rock Hill a few days ago. An eight year old boy caught hold of a live wire that had been blown by a storm. His feet wer touching the damp ground and the circuit was completed through his body," He was thrown flat. Several persons were standing near, and seeing his predicament, tried to help him. Every one who touched him was thrown to the ground with a severe shock of electricity. At last the boy's father got an axe and cut the wire, breaking the circuit. The child was badly burned on the back of its neck and was almost dead. Dreyfus was condemned on two grounds: First, he was a Jew, and second, France demands a victim. The "extenuating circumstances" tound by the judges are probably these: First, he could not help being born a Jew, and second, he has declared that he would not attempt to make any one suffer for the wrongs he has endured. THE MORNING POST,

"Was it gold they found, and if not, what was it?" is the question that is perplexing a party of young men of this city, says the Wilmington Messenger. The story dates back to Monday afternoon, and the scene is Nobl'es ent, about à mile down the Ouslow railroad, which tract of land has been muchly talked about and spaded by treasure seekers. The af ternoon of the day mentioned two young men were out strolling and when near Noble's cut came upon two white men digging a hole. The men stopped upon seeing that they were observed and tried to screen their actions. The young men passed on, but on Tuesday night organ ized a party of about half a dozen and went back to the scene. They discovered a deep hole dug in the ground and its shape at the bottom looked as though a chest had been taken from it. This filled them with wonderment and their thoughts reverted at once to the oft told tales of a treasure buried in this locality. E. E. Turner, Compton, Mo.,
