The Right Sort of a Girl.

Asheville Citizen,

A Connecticut girl [whose marriage to three million dollars and a British title depend upon the abandonment of an aged mother recently earned immortal fame by determining to remain true to the dear old soul that gave her birth.

We do not claim to be well versed in those qualities and attributes which makes the modern Marriagable maiden, but we imagine that there is a steady demand for girls who are "mother's right hand." The Bible tell us that when a child was born to Ruth the women came and congratulated Naomi, saying: May he be one who refresheth thy soul and comforted thy old age." Children who in spite of mature age will retain the parental word find in these words the highest standard of filial affection. There is no spectacle more grand or deed more noble than a child "refreshing the soul" of an aged father or mother. Old age requires a peculiar treatment, and if patience is at any time a virtue, then a gentle forbearance with the weakness of aged parents is one of the eight beatitudes. To the father and mother who are slowly but surely descending the hill of life the knowledge that their feet are guided by the offspring on whom, in their early years they centered their affections, is of necessity a source of great happiness and comfort.

Educated minds have declared that next to the Divine love, that which exists between parent and child supersedes all others. The love existing between man and wife is acquired, and is to a certain extent, of an earthly element, but there is an indefinable bond of affection between mother and child which never dies.

All honor to the Connecticut girl. Three million dollars would perhaps have opened for her the way to temporary happiness, but it could not have given her another mother. She may, it is true, be the subject of sympathy from those "girls of the hour" who allow the glare of prospective gold to blind their eyes to the motherly light which formed a halo above their cradles, but in the years to come, when the hand of time has caused the bloom to fade from her cheek, her declining years will not be haunted by the cry: "There is no wind so keen, or storm so pitiless as filial ingratitude."

FOR ADVERTISERS.

Fish cannot live in still water. Neither can progressive men live with the man who doesn't advertise.

Small obstacles on the track don't keep the train from moving on, yet sometimes a mighty little disappointment in advertising will cause a big man to falter.

One advertisement hasn't the power to increase a business no more than one grain of corn has of fattening a chicken.

Watering the lawn once won't keep it green the rest of the year. Advertising once won't make any noticeable difference in the annual profit.

It would take an unlimited amount of fuel to heat the whole outdoors yet, a great many advertisers would like to reach the four corners of the earth with a fifty dollar advertising appropriation.

Men never become prominent by the things they didn't do. It's the doing that counts—advertising, for instance.

A trolley car with the juice off, like a business minus the advertising appropriation, it soon comes to a standstill.

Better a poor man than a dead one; better a little advertising than none at all.

Dark clouds do not always signify storm. Neither do slow returns from advertising always mean failure.

Betting on the base ball suit instead of the ability of the players, like selecting a medium for looks instead of merit, often results in disappointment.

The best medium won't improve poor copy any more than a fine frame will improve a bad picture.

The finest horn in the world is no good if it isn't blown. Neither is the best advertising campaign ever planned of any use if it isn't put into execution.

It's as easy to run an ocean steamer with a sewing machine treadle as it is to build up a business in the way some men advertise.

If people traveled as fast on the railroad as they expect to travel in advertising, it would take about twenty minutes to cross the continent.

Home, Sweet Home.

People are often very fond of sentimentalizing about "Home, sweet home," but yet apparently take little or no trouble to make their homes sweet.

Home is especially the woman's province, and while her husband provides the material comforts for it, it is her duty and privilege to create its special atmosphere of peace and love. It is the little things, the too often "unconsidered trifles" which constitute the happy home which should be a woman's chief care. To make that home attractive she would be as mindful of all sorts of little details as she used to be of the prettiness of her toilette in the old courting days, when she was so anxious to be pleasing in the eyes of her lover.

Pretty flowers on the table, a spotlessly clean cloth, nicely prepared food, and her self swartened up for the evening, smiling her joy at having him at home, will compensate her husband for all the trials and worries of the day. All this may, and probably will, demand some self sacrifice on the wife's part, for, she, too, has had her trials. She has been as busy in her home, very likely, as he has been in his office, but still, however, much she is tempted to pour out her troubles to him, she will be rewarded for her self-control if she holds them back.

A pleasant word from her will go a long way to make him forget how tired and harassed he feels, and by the time he has been refreshed with food in the restful atmosphere of home, he will be able to give her the sympathy she wants in whatever is troubling her.

Some people are full of sunshine and happiness, and others with the reverse. This is not simply the result of riches or poverty, but character. Love is the foundation upon which home is built—love between man and wife, parents and children, but love must be cultivated. Selfishness is the destroyer of love, and if self be allowed to get the upper hand, then sweet temper and patience will soon give way to irritability and hardness, and home will cease to be sweet.

Home is largely what we women make it, so if it be not happy, let us look for the fault in ourselves before looking farther afield.—Selected.

EXCURSIONS TO THE WEST

To the Pacific Coast—to California, Oregon, Washington—round-trip, long transit and return limits, liberal stop-over privileges.

The rate is practically on the basis of one fare for the round trip. Of course, if you wish to visit both California and Oregon or Washington, the cost is slightly more.

These reduced rates are in effect on certain dates in months of May to October, inclusive. They apply from all Eastern points via Chicago, St. Louis or Memphis gateways. The Rock Island System will take you up in either Chicago or St. Louis, or at hundreds of other Middle West points and carry you to the Coast in through Standard or Tourist Sleepers with unexcelled Dining Car service. The Rock Island also affords a choice of routes: on the "Scenic" route you can stop off in Colorado—see Salt Lake City—visit Yellowstone National Park; on the "Southern" route you can go via El Paso, thru New Mexico, then "up coast" to San Francisco and on to Portland or Seattle if desired.

In short, these Pacific Coast excursions offer an unusually good chance to see our western country in a comprehensive manner.

If you desire to go only as far as Colorado, there are excursion rates in effect to that section and return, all summer long, specially reduced June 30 to July 4, August 12 and 13, and August 30 to September 4. Extension trips to Ogden or Salt Lake and return at low cost also.

From September 15 to October 31, 1905, one-way tourist or "colonist" tickets will be on sale to California and the Pacific Northwest—about half regular fare.

If interested, send name and address on this coupon, designating which booklet wanted and to what point you plan to go. Name probable date of start also, so we can advise definitely with respect to rates, etc.
