Why Abuse Your Watch
You do not run your buggy, sewing machine or other machinery till it squeaks and grinds and cuts itself to pieces. You clean and oil it often. You should be as careful with your watch. It is small and cannot squeak loud when it is dry and needs oiling. You may not know it till the watch is completely ruined and stops. Bring your watch to me I will show you and explain the exact condition. Take proper care of your watch and it will last you a life time. Consult me on watch diseases.
Yours Very Truly,

A Righteous Judgment About to Be Delivered.

Monroe Journal.
Not since 1896 has there been such deep-seated political activity throughout the country as at present. Then the country was in the throes of hard times and business depression of an unprecedented nature, and the only concern of people was how to remedy the situation and get the country once more on its feet. Today, following a decade of prosperity, the public mind is in a state of revolution and indignant protest against the idea of moral perversion that has been found to exist in our public and private life. The situation is thus summed up by the New York World:

"The size of the Democratic victory which will be announced on the morning of November 9th next will be staggering. It will include an overwhelming majority in the House of Representatives and a gain of many United States Senators. Ohio, the President's own State, will be lost to the Republicans New York, the State of the ex-President, will be sweeping Democratic. Majorities will be so large that people will tire of computing them.

"Not through Democratic virtues and abilities but in spite of Democratic blunders and weaknesses are those things to come about; not because there are more Democrats than Republicans but because there are more American progressives than stand-patters; not as a rebuke to this man or that man in particular, but as a condemnation of many men; not as a rejection of one policy but as a repudiation of many policies; not as an evidence of momentary indignation but as voicing the demands of a great and free people for light, for truth, for justice, for economy, for peace!

"What are these bitter Republican quarrels but attempts in advance to escape the judgment which all know is at hand? There is a mad rush for safety. Responsible men are posing as irresponsible. Old offenders masquerade as innocents. Sacrifices are offered up in the hope that the popular wrath may be appeased. There is talk even of a third term in the White House for the vociferous and lawless person under whom Cannon and Aldrich and Payne and Sherman and Dalzell got their strangle grip on party and country.

"In spite of all this there will be no mistake about that which is to take place in November. It is to be more a Republican defeat than a Democratic victory; more a popular uprising against plutocracy and privilege than a party revival; more a matured verdict on Rooseveltism than a upon Republicanism; more a rebuke to Taft as proxy than of Taft as President; more of an expression of hope in Democracy than of faith in Democracy.

"Turn on the light!"
The Journal is not one of those who are silly enough to think much lasting good can come from a mere change in parties. When the people turn over the government to a few politicians and the men back of them who for their own ends, we will always have bad government, no matter which party it happens to be. Hence, as the World says, the country is not so much determined on a Democratic victory as it is on a Republican defeat.

THE LAST WILL.

[By William Fisher, Esq.]
West Publishing Co's Docket.
He was stronger and cleverer, no doubt, than other men, and in many broad lines of business he had grown rich, until his wealth exceeded exaggeration. One morning, in his office, he directed a request to his confidential lawyer to come to him in the afternoon. He intended to have his will drawn. A will is a solemn matter, even with men whose life is given up to business, and who are by habit mindful of the future. After giving this direction he took up no other matter, but sat at his desk alone and in silence.

It was a day when summer was first new. The pale leaves upon the trees were starting forth upon the unbending branches. The grass in the park had a freshness in its green like the freshness of the blue of the sky and of the yellow of the sun—a freshness to make one wish that life might renew its youth. The clear breezes from the south wafted about, and then were still, as if loth to go finally away.

Half idly, half thoughtfully the rich man wrote upon the white paper before him, beginning what he wrote with capital letters, such as he had not made since, as a boy at school he had taken pride in his skill with the pen.

In the Name of God, Amen. I, Charles Lounsbury, being of sound and disposing mind and memory do now make and publish this my Last Will and Testament, in order, as justly as I may, distribute my interests in the world among succeeding men.

And first, the part of my interests which is known among men and recognized in the sheep-bound volumes of the law as my property, being inconsiderable and of none account, I make no account of in this my will. My right to life, it being but a life estate, is not at my disposal, but, these things excepted, all else in the world I now proceed to devise and bequeath.

Item—And first, I give to good Fathers and Mothers but in trust for their children, nevertheless, all good little words of praise and all quaint pet names, and I charge said parents to use them justly but generously as the needs of their children shall require.

Item—I leave to children exclusively, but only for the life of their childhood, all and every, the dandelions of the fields and the daisies thereof, with the right to play among them freely, according to the custom of children, warming them at the same time against the thistles. And I devise to children the yellow shores of creeks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, with the dragon flies that skim the surface of said water, and the odors of the willows that dip into the said waters, and the white clouds that float over the giant trees.

And I leave the children the long, long days to be merry in, in a thousand ways, and the Night and the Moon and the train of the Milky Way to wonder at, but subject, nevertheless, hereinafter given to lovers; and

They Have a Definite Purpose.
Foley's Kidney Pills give quick relief in cases of kidney and bladder ailments. Mrs. Rose Glaser Terra Haute, Ind., tells the result in her case: "After suffering for many years from a serious case of kidney trouble and spending much money for so-called cures, I found Foley's Kidney Pills the only medicine that gave me a permanent cure. I am again able to be up and attend to my work. I shall never hesitate to recommend them." M. B. Blackburn.

I give to each child the right to choose a star that shall be his, and I direct that the child's father shall tell him the name of it, in order that the child may always remember the name of that star after he has learned and forgotten astronomy.

Item—I devise to boys jointly all the useful idle fields and commons where ball may be played, and all snow-clad hills where one may coast, and all streams and ponds where one may skate to baye and to hold the stave for the period of their boyhood. And all meadows, with the clover blooms, and the butterflies there of; and all woods, with their apparitions of squirrels and whirring birds and echoes and strange noises; and all distant places which may be visited, together with the adventures there found, I do give to said boys to be theirs. And I give to said boys each his own place at the fireside at night, with all pictures that may be seen in the burning wood or coal to enjoy without let or hindrance and without any incumbrance of cares.

Item—To lovers I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need, as the stars of the sky, the red, red roses by the wall, the snow of the hawthorn, the sweet strains of music, or ought else they may desire to figure to each other the lastings and beauty of their love.

Item—To young men jointly, being joined in a brave, mad crowd, I devise and bequeath all boisterous, inspiring sports of rivalry. I give to them the disdain of weakness and undaunted confidence in their own strength. Though they are rude and rough I leave to them alone the power of making lasting friendships and possessing companions; and to them exclusively I give all merry songs and brave choruses to sing, with smooth voices to troll them forth.

Item—And to those who are no longer children or youths or lovers, I leave Memory, and I leave to them the volumes of the poems of Shakespeare, and of other poets, if there are others, to the end that they may live the old days over again freely and fully, without title or diminution; and to those who are no longer children or youths or lovers, I leave, too, the knowledge of what a rare, rare world it is.—Charles Lounsbury.

The Lash of a Fiend would have been about as welcome to A. Cooper, of Oswego, N. Y., as a merciless lung-racked cough that defied all remedies for years. "It was most troublesome at night," he writes, "nothing helped me until I used Dr. King's New Discovery which cured me completely. I never cough at night now." Millions know its matchless merits for stabs, born colds, obstinate coughs, Sore lungs, lagrippe, asthma, hemorrhage, croup, whooping cough, or hay fever. It relieves quickly and never fails to satisfy. A trial convinces, 50c and $1. Trial bottle free. It's positively guaranteed by all druggists.

THE CONFEDERATE.

Charlotte News.
We pity that heart that did not swell and that soul that was not uplifted yesterday when the matchless warriors of the South and the great South-builders gathered once more in annual reunion and lived again the stirring times of an age of heroism that may possibly be equalled some time but which shall never be surpassed as long as the world stands.

Living or dead, all honor and glory to the Confederate soldier, gray-garbed cavalier of the Stars and Bars, who for the love of home and friends and the principles of the fathers, performed unparalleled feats of valor, while all the world wondered; and who, when he had done all and more than a man could, returned and faced a land of ruins with unshaken faith and courage, with courage, if it is possible, even greater than he had displayed on the battlefield, and set to work to rebuild homes and systems and commonwealths, and to cleanse the land of beasts of prey.

We speak of the private soldier, of the man behind the musket, of the man who shook the hills of Fredericksburg and hurled himself against the heights of Gettysburg with nothing in his mind but Love and Duty.

Let never a jot or tittle of the story of a Southern private soldier be lost in this amazing era of industrial expansion and development which is blossoming, when the minds of younger generations will be filled with schemes to make the South what she was destined to be by God Almighty the pleasantest and richest and the grandest land on the globe. Let it be forever remembered but that for the Confederate soldier turned citizen and constructive statesman after the war was over, there could not be the peace and happiness and the development, the riches, and the white man's civilization and institutions with which Dixie is most abundantly blessed today.

He made it all possible. It took fifty years for the South to find herself, but the task has been accomplished, and as a younger South turns to newer days let it take with it the picture of a ragged soldier with his back toward home; let it take with it the picture of that soldier turned citizen patiently building up again the homeland he had bled for—a picture as heroic as the world has ever seen or ever will see.

And don't let us confine our worship of the rapidly vanishing soldier to reunion days. Let's do something more than make such occasions pleasant for him. It had been charged that we have no use for the soldier except on these occasions and at elections. It is a lie out of the whole cloth. For the South has done about as well as she could by the Confederate, but today there is not a single Southern State that cannot quadruple its efforts to keep the clouds away from the sun as it sets for the last time for each one of the men who freely gave their best years to the cause of the storm-cradled nation that fell.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.
Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering, therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your other organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.
