In other words, the answer to the second question is negative. Our schools are not properly conducted, and no one seems to know an applicable renedy. Numerious theories have been offered, but none of them stand the test. They seems the known applicable in a classroom, and are encouraging when seen in proat. It is possible for many of them to be used, but thus far all of them have failed to a very great extent. What is wrong?

It is not economically, in all. Land, labor and capital are the newspass three factors involved in production, land the constant of the factors in all purchases, the cost of production. to take less profits.

Something to Think About It is said that only from 1 to 15 for cent of the farms of the United traces are inherited. The rest must be paid for in whole or in part once with each generation. Can this be done? Without increasing land traines this becomes increasingly more difficult. A reasonable rate of incest on land worth $300.00 will intraines the food at low cest and at the source an interest or tental charge of

The census shows that our farm acreage has not increased near in proportion to the increase in population. It is true that we have regions of undeveloped or only partially developed land, but the unseed land is the least modern to attack this problem with the hope of arriving at a satisfactory solution. If land values are run up beyond their value for production may be a solution and the other factors of production and the prices of farm production and the prices of farm production and the prices of farm production and the prices of farm production and the prices of production and prices of production and production and prices of prices of prices of prices of price ed land is the least productive purposes in order that the speculator, is poorly located or needs de- be he farmer or real estate dealer. Our labor cests are greater of will find farming unprofitable.

The brighter and more ambitious covased yields per acre usually young men will be attracted away anolve more labor the increase in from the farm and the farmers as a production from more intensive class will deterorate. This in turn callare or from developing less despath mean that our civilization will go backward instead of forward.

Every citizen is therefore inter-ested in the land problem and should use his influence to see that specula-tors do not run the selling value beyond production value. Fictitious and values spell higher cost of living and ultimately a lower class of citizens as farmers.
