

THE LIGHTED CROSS

(By M. T. Spaulter)
 On Pentecost's wonderful shore
 There stands a lighted cross,
 Whose gleaming brightness ever shines
 The darkest night across.
 By sons of Wesley was it set,
 In stone and cement base,
 The daughters, too, of Wesley set
 To put that cross in place.
 Not that a human form might need
 From beams of glory-lore
 But that its radiant light should lead
 Some soul from grief or care.
 To reach to the ends of life
 We need a shining light—
 To struggling souls in the night.

Between the hosts of wrong and right
 If in some breast revives a hope
 That longs or law was dead;
 If with some inner darkness eases
 To rise some drooping head—
 That cross of light shall meet its end,
 And give its mission well,
 The holy Christ has mercy laid
 And made all hopes to swell.
